lanta Saturday night boomed out a message. People asked themselves what it was all about; they made the same query of their friends. They learned that Atlanta was receiving just one more reminder that she must raise the $1,500,000 asked of her to make a Greater Georgia Tech-a Georgia Tech that the state will be proud to own and to leave to generations to come. While people trembled and dreamed vague dreams of air raids and bombardments, they were letting the big idea soak in-that a greater industrial Georgia will come through a greater Georgia Tech; that the $5,000,000 asked from the good peo ple of the state will surely be aised, for Georgia's pledged to it.

At Grant Field and Pledmont Park. booming cannon and blinding flares that lighted the heavens weren't entirely necessary to the message-they were just heavy exclamation points after the opinion of all Georgia: "Tech needs all we can give her; we must give!"

Teams Start Work.

The second vastly important phase of Atlanta's own campaign to raise $1,500,000 to expand Tech begins Monday morning when the twenty-five teams for the wide campaign start upon their work. They will be led by Albert S. Adams, chairman, and Robert Gregg, co-chairman. They are confident of success and are highly enthusiastic to a man.

The inception of their drive follows close upon and coincides with the work of the initial subscriptions committee-the group of pron inent Atlanta men who have discovered during the past week that Atlanta is for Tech, heart and soul, by the readiness with which the city's large commercial and industrial firms have responded to the ap-Thomas H. Willis Makes Plea for Tech

Tomorrow morning, promptly at 10 o'clock, 250 loyal representative Atlantans will begin a thorough systematic canvass of the city, for the purpose of raising Atlanta's quota of $1,500,000 for a Greater Georgia Tech.

Under the splended leadership of Mr. Thomas H. Daniel, Mr. Albert S. Adams and Mr. Robert Gregg, this fine body of men representing every line of business and endeavor, will go about the vitally important task before them with a spirit of determination, zeal, enthusiasm and confidence which absolutely assures its

Our people have been liberally educated as to the worth of this institution to Atlanta and to the state, and as to its crying need in the way of buildings, dormitories and equipment.

Throughout Georgia the people are responding magnificently to this call to them as Georgians. Their contributions are being made unselfishly in behalf of our state and our boys. Our sister cities over the state have accepted our challenge. They have generously accepted their quotas and are just as keenly alive to the possibilities of this splendid undertaking as ourselves. It is up to Atlanta therefore, the metropolis of the state and the home of the institution, to take the lead and to set the pace for the rest of the Tech is Atlanta's greatest asset. It is our best advertisement. Its reputation is nationwide. Its 2,800 students each year carry to all parts of Georgia and the south the story of Atlanta's greatness. These boys spend their money here. They form ties of friendship. They become imbued with our spirit and remain always loyal to our city.

Atlanta has responded to many large calls upon her generosity. No other call has ever had so strong an appeal as this. The success and growth of Tech means the success and growth of the south. Tech boys are prepared to build a new industrial south. To turn our raw products into finished goods, and to make of Georgia's vast resources a treasure store for our people. The opportunity is here. The appeal is here. The cause is here.

Every man and woman who is interested in Atlanta and in Georgia must respond. The response must be universal, and it One million five hundred thousand dollars must be generous. cannot be raised otherwise. It can be raised and paid in five years without being felt if all our people will combine and respond according to their means.

At the end of this five years Atlanta will have been paid back ten fold for every dollar she gives now, and our city will have for all time an institution that will continuously contribute to the upbuilding of our state and section

I earnestly ask the co-operation of every loval Atlantan in this effort

Atlanta recently demonstrated her bigness in the success of her bond campaign. This was one of the greatest forward steps in our history, because it meant at least a high school education for every boy and girl within our borders. Why not continue the program so splendidly begun and give our young manhood the invaluable college education and technical training that Greater Tech will afford? We gave the bond money willingly. In the same spirit we will make the Tech contribution.

Tech and Atlanta will always be indebted to the two hundred and fifty Atlanta men who are undertaking this canvass. Let the welcome you give them attest your interest in your city.

"Abe Powers had been a model prisoner while here," declared Warden J. E. Smith. "He was not a trusty, but was allowed some measure of freedom, just as all prisoners who are worked in the fields are of necessity relieved of constant supervision. They are under guard, of course, but not under close guard.

"Powers had never gievn any indication of trouble while here, and I had no reason to fear, from his behavior, that he might make a break for freedom. He was in charge of the tools and agricultural implements, and also was a water carrier for the men in the fields.

"He escaped from the guards just before lunch time on Friday, and his absence was discovered when the prisoners were lined up for roll call about noon. The pursuit was immediately begun, with bloodhounds. I was one of the searching party, and did not return to the prison farm until late in the afternoon.

Circumstances surrounding Powers' escape furnish convincing proof that it was a long, premeditated and carefully planned affair. The vial point in the plan seems to have been to have Powers made a trusty. This having been done, the rest of the escape was easy.

TAX COLLECTOR IS SHORT $19,072 Rest for Week-End

Audit of Books of Missing Mitchell Official Indicates Shortage Confessed in Letter.

Moultrie. Ga., April 16.—(Special.) — L. Boyd, missing tax collector of Mitchell county, is short in his accounts $19.072.49, according to figures furnished the board of county commissioners at a special session held at Camilla today by the auditor, who has just completed his work checking the books and accounts of Boyd. The figures created no surprise in Camilla as it has been generally understood that the tax collector's shortage would total about this amount.

It is said by his close friends that day night, despite the fact that Frihe lost most of the money speculating in cotton futures. It is not believed that he has more than a few hundred dollars at most when he left Camilla about March 10, ostantially about March 10, ostantially as the state of the most when he left Camilla about March 10, ostantially as the state of the most with the state of the most with the state of the most of the m he left Camilla about March 10, ostensibly on a two weeks vacation trip. Nothing was thought of Boyd's decision to take a vacation, as there was no work to be done in his office for the reason that the work of collecting the remainder of the taxes due the county had been halted by a temporary injunction halted by a temporary injunction until the legality of certain pottlons of the levy could be tested.

Letter Bared Shortage.

It was not until Boyd wrote a letter to a member of the board of county commissioners, confessing he was short in his accounts that there was any suspicion whatever that all might not be well with the affairs of his office. This letter was mailed in Birmingham, and an audit of his books was ordered at once. The security company on his bonds was notified also. Now that the amount of Boyd's shortage has been established, it is likely that action towards locating him will be taken, and that grand jury investigation of the matter will follow.

Talks Made.

J. K. Giles discussed "Agriculture in the Campaign." R. P. Brooks, of Athens, "The Alumni and the Campaign," and E. W. Highsmith, a student at the university, created much enthusiasm when he told the delegates that the class of 1921 had already pledged liself to give more than $40,000. W. B. Dickinson, director of the war memorial fund, discussed the organization of the campaign. The singing of old college songs was led by Martin Hodgson.

The raising of one million dollars by the alumni will only care for the most pressing needs of the institution, it is declared. Professor Brooks illustrated the dire plight of the university by telling of a student who tried to make $25 from home provide for his needs of text books, a suit of clothes, an overcoat, a hat, shoes and an umbrella, and who gave up in disgust. The absolutely essential needs on the campus at Athens cannot be met with less than $3,500,000, he stated.

Alumni to Raise Millios.

The alumni have determined to start the ball rolling by raising a single million, and will leave the responsibility for carrying out the rest of the program to the state legislature. The campaign is one of the first completed from funds raised by the alumni. The other five items were decided upon as requiring immediate attention. During the past ten years the attendance at the university has increased 125 per cent, and during that time not a single additional room has been provided for housing university men. There is now available space for 270 boys crowded three in a room, and there is one of the campus. Dining hall facilities are about equal to the lodging university men. There is now available space for 270 boys crowded three in a room, and there is one dormitory for seventy-two women on the agricultural college part of the campus. Dining hall facilities are about equal to the lodging accommodations—utterly inadequate for a student body of over 1,200, it is declared.

A Little Journey--through A Clothing Factory

ECENTLY it was our privilege to make a little journey thru the factory of HICKEY-FREEMAN CO., in Rochester, N. Y., where many of the fine hand-tailored clothes for men, that we sell, are made.

This factory is not situated right in the City where smoke and soot make their demands on the lungs and lives of people. On a big plot of ground far away from other buildings, it is inviting in its cleanliness.

Every side, supplied with wonderful windows, is subject to the play of sunshine and air, so essential to human life and human efficiency.

This favorable condition is reflected in happy, contented workers on every hand - whose work and whose hearts harmonize so splendidly with the slogan that meets you at every turn,

"Keep The Quality Up"

The spirit back of the factory inheres in men of the Executive Department, who get their happiness from their product, both in men and materials—and who take their profit as a sequence.

We are giving you this information so that you may know where and under what conditions the clothing you wear is produced.

Mrs. Pauline Elmer to Seek Larger Portion of Estate by Appeal to the Supreme Court.

Macon, Ga., April 16 .- (Special) The will of the late Fred D Shepard, of Houston county, will stand as originally drawn unless the supreme court reverses the decision of Judge Malcolm D. Jones, Harding.

As labor's representative on the board, the president named Walter L. McMenimen, acting president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and a prominent figure in resent negotiations between the ralipod unions and managers. Samuel Higgins, of New York, a former general manager of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway, was named to represent the management group, while former Governor Ben W. Hooper, of Tennessee, was given the vacant place alloted to a representative of the public.

All three of the nominations caused more or less surprise, none of the men named having figured prominently in gossip about the vacancies, which occurred yesterday at the expiration of the terms of three of the superior court, who return-

Appealed to Supreme Court.

The case will be appealed to the supreme court. No effort was made to prove the will was not genuine. The only point made by Mrs. Elmer in her efforts to secure a larger portion of the estate, which was valued at $200,000, was that her husband died a resident of Florida, and she was entitled to a larger dower than allowed her in the will. The body of Shepard was exhumed at the instigation of relatives some six months after he was buried. Dr. John Funke and Dr. Edgar Everhardt, of Atlanta, made a chemical analysis of the body, and swore that Shepard died from corrosive poison administered through the mouth. Shepard's wife, now Mrs. Pauline Elmer; her sister, Mrs. Ione Henry; her son by a former marriage. Ernest Hopson, and Mrs. Annie Cutts, were arrested on warrants charging murder. At a commitment hearing held in Macon last December and which lasted nearly two weeks, all four defendants were set free by Judge H. A. Mathews. Appealed to Supreme Court.

"Rosenbluth said, "Be sure that you hit him in a good place, so he won't have a chance to say anything.' Rosenbluth advised me.
"I asked Rosenbluth what I was to do after I shot Cronkhite, and he said, 'You never mind; I willbe somewhere around, and when I see him fall I will run up and grabhim. Then I will yell for a doctor and get him down there, and we will go about it just as if he shot himself. If there are any questions asked, I will tell them he snot hinself accidentally.' I was to say nothing, Rosenbluth told me."

Everything happened as scheduled, Fothier stated in his alleged confession, and Major Cronkaite was shot in the right breast. After the shooting Ponthier described the scene as follows:
"As Cronkhite fell, I hard another shot from behind and Captain Rosenbluth came rushing up on the scene, He picked up Cronkhite and dragged his body so that it lay in a position parallel with the road, Rosenbluth then drew his pistol from its holster and shot a hole through a tobacco can and said, 'do not forget about this being target practice and that the major shot himself accidentally. If any questions are asked about this let me do the talking, and you keep still.'

think he's dead."

Prosecutor Seiden said he has five separate statements alleged to have been made by Pothler and turned over to him by federal authorities. These vary in some details. The board of inquiry at Camp Lewis which investigated the death of Major Cronkhite decided that he was killed by a bullet from his own pistol.

Pothler and Rosenbluth have been turned over to Mr. Seiden for prosecution but he has not yet filed state charges against them.

"Despite the alleged confessions I am still somewhat in the dark." Mr. Seiden said today, "and I do not know how to proceed."

Mr. Selden said today, "and I do not know how to proceed."

Mr. Selden said that the alleged confessions wert in the form of sworn statements. "There is no hint of a motive as to why Rosenbluth should have desired the death of Cronkhite," he said. "Pothler also gives as his only reason for killing Cronkhite that he was obeying the orders of a commanding officers. This is a weak point and it should be cleared up before state charges are filed."

Nutting, chairman of the charter revision committee, which adversed an ordinance to abolish the charter boards of the e:ty government, conceded Saturday that it is exceedingly probable that the general council will Monday afternoon overthrow the action of the committee and vote to dissolve boards, with the exception of the school board and the board of trustees of Carnegie library.

Mr. Nutting will introduce a resolution to except the school board. which is elected by the people, and the Carnegie board, from the provisions of the ordinance. Councilman Claude Ashley had also announced his intention to fight for exemption of the school board.

After having spent $100,000 appropriated for the erection of a new cyclorama at Grant Park the board last Friday requested an additional $46,000 to complete the structure. Councilman Robert A. Gordon, a member of the finance committee, scored the board, declaring it had "no brains" and threatened to introduce a resolution in council to deprive the board of the power to spend any more money.

Their refusal showed their attitude and was not actuated by the wage dispute, but was a kind of direct action for securing some kind of nationalization. When it became evident the break was coming, the anger of the miners was unbounded."

According to other accounts, the atmosphere was electrical, and bitter personalities were hurled to and fro. Shouts of "traitor!" and other similar epithets, were heard by reporters outside the hall, where the meeting was held.

In the meantime the stoppage of coal mining continues, and it is pointed out in various quarters that the situation is still serious. Announcement is made on behalf of the government that efforts to reach a solution will not be relaxed. Reports from provincial centers mention the bitter disappointment felt in the extremist sections of the miners, railroad men and transport workers at the failure of the "triple alliance" strike.

MuchNeededFriend MOVED TO SON'S HOME In Salvation Army

This is the way Johnny Harrigan told it down at Salvation army headquarters last night: Johnny is envoy to Col. Joseph Atkinson, commanding the southern division of the army. When every-body else leaves, Johnny assumes charge of the entire work of the army. Folks that are hungry, folks that are cold, and folks that need clothes come, and Johnny fixes 'em up. He sleeps there and answers all calls for relief.

Little Girl Finds C. P. BYRD'S MOTHER

Attorney Issues Statement, Explaining Byrd's Attitude in Court Proceedings.

A statement issued Saturday by Winfield Jones, attorney for Charles P. Byrd, in connection with the latter's recent injunction suit, shows that the mother of Mr. Byrd is now in such improved physical condition as to be moved to the home of her

The statement follows: "The recent unfortunate litigation raining so hard and steadily, Johnny sat thinking over the unfortunate folks who had been in to see him since noon, when a little girl of about 6 knocked timidly on the door. When Johnny opened it, he says she stood dripping like a closed umbrella. Her single garment was water-soaked. The yellow curls were a tangled mass of unmanageable hair.

"Please sir," she said, "my mamma said if I come around and told you about us, you'd give us something to eat."

"I certainly will," Johnny replied, and picking her up, he carried her over to a chair and peeled off a banana from a bunch nearby. When she had eaten it she curled up in his lap and grew confidential.

Just around the corner was the little girl's mother with a three-week's old baby, while in Grady hospital, the father, a patient of twenty-four hours, is fighting bravely the ravages of double-pneumonia. The rent is due. There was no food in the home.

And so through the rain the little girl went back home, and with her Harrigan with a basket piled with food, while a wagon followed with coal. And Monday the rent will be paid, for Colonel Atkinson has taken charge of the case, and the army will take care of the family until the father is able to support them again. Harrigan said so, and he knows.

Savannah, Macon, Columbus, Augusta, Waycross, Brunswick, Americus and other cities of the state have accepted their quotas without question and have begun work preliminary to securing the amounts desired. Victor Allen, state chairman, is enthused over excellent prospects facing the state-wide phase of the campaign and believes man, is enthused over excellent prospects facing the state-wide phase of the campaign and believes that Georgia is now convinced that she must do something for the betterment of her educational facilities. This, they realize, must begin with Georgia Tech, says Mr. Allen.

Response Gratifying.

"It is the most gratifying thing in the world to see the splendid way in which Georgia is responding to Tech's appeal," said Dr. K. G. Matheson, president of the institution, Saturday. "In no quarter have we met with anything resembling apathy, and the unanimous rapidity with which the people have seized upon the opportunity to do something for Tech spells great things for Georgia's industrial and educational future. The renaissance of Georgia Tech and industrial Georgia is surely at hand."

Wide interest with which the campaign is being received, received great impetus from the Tech industrial tour, which carried the state's leaders from town to town in Georgia to preach the gospel of a greater Tech.

A notable example of the read! ess with which the towns respond is found in the case of Columbus, where a quota of $295.000 has been eagerly accepted. This quota is proportionately greater than that of Atlanta—$150,000—and G. Gunby Jordan, prominent citizen of the Muscogee city, Saturday wrote to Atlanta leaders saying that J. Homer Dimon, Columbus chairman, and the other citizens of the town had not the slightest doubt about raisng this amount for Georgia Tech

Tech Is Preparing for Arrival Of Harvard Diamond Performers; Crimson To Be Here Four Days

BY WALLACE GEORGE.

The baseball representatives of Harvard university roll into town tomorrow morning and will work out on Grant field for several days. They have two scraps scheduled down here, a game being played with the Tech Neilow Jackets Tuesday afternoon on Grant field and one with the Oglethorpe Petrels dated for Wednesday afternoon out at Ponce de Leon park.

The Crimson nine come directly to Atlanta from Boston. A barnstorming rip, they undertook last year at list time in the east proved of no benefit and it is the hope of the Harvard officials that with a good week's work in the sunny south that they can go back home fit to cope with the best of them.

The Harvard nine plans to spend all of iff time right here in Atlanta and will hold dally workout on the Tech ball field. Thursday night depart, for the east, stopping off in New York Saturday afternoon for a game with the University of Columbia.

Fourteen strong, the Crimson comes to town, and the Tech officials feel distinctly honored that they have selected Grant field as the best place in the south for the workout they are needing. The Harvard practises will in no way interfere with the daily work of the Yellow Jackets and the big game Tuesday between the two teams should be the fastest col-

Tech-Auburn Game
Is Rained Out.

Old Jupiter Pluvius scored a technical yictory over both the Yellow Jackets and the Auburn Tigers saturday afternoon and the hour of the game found him leading by a safe margin of six inches of rain and mud. Incidentally it ruined Tech's last chance to get a crack at Auburn this year and broke up a game that gave more than the usual signs of being a corker.

Tech, by virtue of her decisive, 8 to 3 win over the Plainsmen Friday, takes the series and moves one notch nearer the southern title. The four games Auburn has scheduled with the Georgia nine will have much bearing on the latter, too, and an even break will give the Jackets just a little edge over either, in so far as the three team had scored when the umpire called off the contests after a summer shower fell. The umpire in chief did not wait even ten minutes, but sung out "This game is called off on account of wet known."

LIKE A WELL-KNOWN brand of summer underwear, R. E. cowardly behind a network of initials. We don't know who R. E. V. is, but follow our usual centennial custom of printing the truth, the whole truth and everything but the truth. This Curl Up O'Groggy was a weight-guesser who bummed around the lobbies of Roughtown's de luxe hotels. HE CLAIMED TO have developed a "Heel-to-Chin" slug that would put the bulldoze on all competitors. As a matter of fact, his best punch was the "Nose-to-Rosin" swing that won him great fame as a hypnotist's subject. During the epidemic of high rents in Roughtown, Curl Up inaugurated the great Back-to-the-Canvas campaign. He proved it every time he met an opponent in the scared circle:

THEY USED TO call it the squared circle before Curl Up started in to take 'em on the chin regardless of color, creed or previous condition of servitude. After Curl Up flashed his super-human diving ability it became known as the sacred circle. The day he met Gink Fowler, merchant prince of knuckles, was a glopious paragraph in the Bost of Hoodlumism. Gink was the last letter in the last syllable in the last word in the last chapter of hoodluming.

STEPPING INTO THE squared circle, Gink did fall into a clinch. But, if the words of Patrick Henry, it takes two to make a clinch. Without freedom of speech, without equality among men, without the blesses privilege of representation in the law-making councils of the nation what good is so-called democracy? It becomes a myth and a sham. Summing up this philosophy, we find in a Ford a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of springs.

WHAT DID INCLE Joe Cannon say? Uncle Joe Is a man who has traveled millions of miles at the government's expense. Uncle Joe says there are more hoboes riding in Pullmans than on freight cars. Do you remember Thomas Jefferson's opening remark in the famous war session of 1759? Thomas said, "Rather an upper on the Fennsy than a lower on the B, and O."

more frequently perhaps than any of his contemporaries. But this is all that one can say.

A Super-Golfer.

As for Miss Alexa Stirling, who is now on the other side, practicing for the British woman's golf championship, she certainly has the best wishes of American golfers, who, however, will hardly place unbounded confidence in the southern girl's ability to dispose of Miss Leitch is indeed a star, a super-golfer; and the woman who defeats her must certainly play extraordinary golf. Miss Stirling knows this. Unquestionably she is as strong a woman golfer as we have had for a long time; she has the great merit of consistency, courage and a good heart under all conditions. Of course, if she should catch Miss Leitch at all off her game she might win; but there is no reason for belief or hope, that the British woman will be caught in any such plight. There are a few flaws in her game and she runs up a minimum of bade-scores.

How about the chances of our amateurs who will play at Hoylake on May 23-28? At least we should have as good a chance for victory as in the open; for Chick Evans. Bobby Jones and Francis Ouimet are all capable of remarkable performances. Still one cannot get away from the fact that Walter Travis is the only American who ever came through in England. Something seems to happen to our men when they get over there. Either they fall down or else some remarkable performance by a Britisher puts them out. Excellence in this country invariably leads to hopes that wither and die the moment the rugged salt air of the British links strikes them.

Golf on This Side.

But we are going to have some international golf on this side of the water, too, in the visit of Duncan and Abe Mitchell English critics do not regard this pair as highly at the Vardon-Ray combination, which was here last year and they

It is so seldom that prize fighters arrive on the scene of battle ahead of the scheduled time, the appearance of Battling Bill Balley, his rising young middleweight, from Texas Saturday night, when he wasn't due until Sunday, was the occasion for much surprise and joy on the part of Promoter-Manager Walk Miller.

'Y' SWIMMERS ARE TO HOLD BIG CARNIVAL

Among those many events held fighting, and the second disputes by the collective Sunday schools of the city, the present swimm meet is likely to top them all. The Decatur Methodist, Gordon Street Decatur Methodist, Gordon Street Presbyterian, Druid Hills Presbyterian and the Jackson Hill Presbyterian are likely to make a high score in the meet since they have already entered with full teams.

With the swimming material to be found in the Sunday schools, together with the facilities of the Y. M. C. A., it is hard to conceive of a bigger or better swimming meet. Mr. Matheny, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., has charge of the meet, and has sent the following rules to most of the participants: participants:

Sunday school swimming, junior division, viz., undr 18 years, pre-liminaries to be held Thursday, April 21, in the Y. M. C. A. pool at n. m. Each Sunday school may enter

Each Sunday school may enter as many contestants as they wish, only being guided by some of the following rules. Those finishing first, second, third and fourth in each event will compete in the finals. Finals to be held May 2, 8 p. m. Each contestant may enter three events, except in class (a), and in this class only two events may be entered. Entries are open to all boys who have been members of the Sunday school they wish to represent at least four weeks previous to the meet.

OHIO STATE TRAINER CURES "OUCHY" ARMS

When a hurler develops on "ouchy" arm, Gurney says, he needs to exercise the larger shoulder muscles. If such a pitcher is permitted to throw a baseball before his arm feels "right," Gurney adds, he never can hope to develop the shoulder muscles properly.

Therefore, "Doc" asserts, the moundsman should toos around a basketball for a week or so to develop the larger muscles and to ease the strain on the smaller baseball is hurled.

Missing Assignments.

BY AL SPINK.

When you were a sporting re-orter years ago, there were wo departments in the assignnent book, departments you had to look after that are missing The first of these was dog

In both the dog fights and the were wagered in the olden days At one time there were cocking mains in which the best chick ens in the north were sent south to meet the best roosters in that part of the country.

Tennessee used to lay claim to the best fighting cocks in the world, and Michigan, Illinois and Ohio each season sent down game roosters to challenge their These fights were very cruel, but they were not considered so by sportsmen of that

But gradually the attention of humane societies was called to them and laws were enacted in nearly every state in the union making it a criminal offense to bait a dog or to carry on a cocking main.

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL WINS

Without doubt the meet will be the biggest of its kind in this section for a long time. Generally Tech has held an invitation meet, or the S. I. A. A. has been held in the vicinity, but this year the Emory meet will be the only track event of any importance to be staged in the neighborhood of Atlanta.

One feature of the meet will be that no one will be able to predict the outcome until April 30, the closing day. It is true that Georgia and Tech will give an idea of their respective strong points in their own meets before the state meet, but Emory, Oglethorpe and Mercer will be an athletic mystery and may spring more than one "dark horse."

Last year the meet was neck and neck between Tech and Georgia. The Tech, who will not be in the races this year, and so that event will be open to competition. Daves, who showed up so well in the Tech-Auburn meet, will have a chance to rub shoulders with Bill Watkins, of Emory, in the half.

In the long distance events there will be a battle between Captain McClesky, of Tech, and Lane Stokes, of Emory, who won the Southern Methodist road race last fall. In the hundles Captain Mann, of Georgia, will compete against Pierce and Brandon, of Emory, while in the weights Van Buren is expected to hold his own. The meet starts promptly at 2 o'clock, Saturday, April 30.

The Old Fighters BY AL SPINK. It is to laugh to hear young sporting writers tell of now much better the prize fighters of today are when compared to the fighters of the long ago. It is very true they are much better in some directions. In stalling and talking about big purses and telling where and when they are going to fight, in general conservation as to their individual ability, the fighters of today have the old fellows beaten many miles.

In the olden days the old fight

rs fought at the drop of the hat and then talked of it later This was especially true of the old Irish fighters, like Burke, Donnelly and Cooper, and the English fighters, like Mace, Sayers. Cribb Allen and Mitchell. You young fellows who are talking about what great fighters your champions of today are when compared to the old world champions must, when all is said, admit the old fellows had it on the present champions when it came to arranging a match and getting it over with without a waste of words or a long-drawn out battle in the newspapers for months and sometimes for years before the battle actually takes

No definite announcement has yet been made on any road as to when the first conference will be held. Under the railroad labor board's rules' decision this week, the carriers and their employees were directed to get together at the earliest possible date. H. G. Yerkes received a broken leg Saturday night when struck on Peachtree near Fourteenth street by an automobile driven by Sam Latimer, negro chauffeur of P. C. McDuffle, who after the accident picked up the injured man and carried him to Grady hospital, where treatment was received.

According to reports made to the police, Yerkes was preparing to catch a car stepping into the street from behind a parked machine, which it is claimed prevented him from seeing the approaching automobile. The chauffeur stated that he was driving at a slow rate of speed, and made all effort to stop at sight of the man.

No attempt was made to escape by the negro, who instead placed the injured man into the car and hurried him to the hospital. He then reported to police headquarters, where no case was made against him. P. H. Brewster

R. H. Martin Considers Mo- Local Service Station Creates toring as Ideal Way to Spend Vacation.

That the summer of 1921 will see an unprecedented amount of cross-country touring is a deduction made from the reports of motor clubs, route bureaus, newspapers and similar sources of information on this growing American pastime. One conservative eastern automobile authority ventures the opinion that more money will be expended in gaspline, tires, oil, meals and hotel accommodations by the 1921 tourists than will be paid at the box offices of the major league ball parks during the regular season, which is a good indication of how popular cross-country motoring has become. While some might regard this expenditure as extravagance to be charged up to pleasure, a more sensible viewpoint is taken by R. H. Martin, 270 Peachtree street, local Oakland representative.

"It must be remembered that practically all of these trips are vacation excursions," says Mr. Martin, and you certainly can't charge up vacations as extravagance. The man who hits the open road in a passenger car is availing himself of broadening recreation.

"The city resident who tours and Today service is possibly the greatest factor in merchanising automobiles. Automobiles are being built better than ever before, and they are being serviced better than ever before. It has been said that more money is invested in service stations and dealer establishments than in the factories and their equipment.

This condition is true, because any piece of mechanism requires service. The man who owns a locomotive or a stationary engine, also ger car is availing himself of broadening recreation.

"The city resident who tours and learns, by first-hand information and observation, the summer problems of the farmer, has a much better understanding of his rural cousin's difficulties than he might gain in any other manner. Travel, by motor as well as by rail or water, is a good thing for everybody.

"It cannot be said that the application of an automobile to such recreation is any indication of the motor car's actual purpose, for every motorist, putting his car into the most efficient work for fifty weeks of the year, certainly is entitled to continue that efficiency over his vacation period.

"For wany motorists this yacation."

"For many motorists, this vacation time gives the only opportunity to associate with their families. And along goes the entire family, whereas without a car, there might be no as, without a car, there might be no vacation at all.

"Another thing that has increased the popularity of touring is the dependability of today's motor car. Having invested in an honest car, the owner may undertake a journey the owner may undertake a journey of any length.

"If he has purchased a car that is backed by a nation-wide sales organization, with dealers, branches and service stations in practically every country, he may start such a journey secure in the knowledge that even mishap or accident will not delay him for long.

"If you doubt the pleasure of summer touring, stand at the wayside of any well-known thoroughfare and see for yourself the pleasure in the faces of these tourists."

MARMONS OFFERED, AT A DISCOUNT WERE NOT NEW

An advertisement from out of town appeared in The Constitution during the past week offering Marmon cars at a discount.

Concerning this advertisement, the Nordyke & Marmon company, of Indianapolis, the manufacturers of the Marmon car, have wired The Constitution as follows:

"Our records show that Marmon cars advertised by Hardwick are not up-to-date cars, and have been out of the factory for several months. Our records would indicate that some of the cars advertised have heretofore been delivered to customers who have purchased new cars."

The F. R. Parker Mator company

The E. R. Parker Motor company, of Atlanta, agents of the Marmon car, is now exhibiting the latest 1921 Marmon cars in its show-room on West Peachtree street.

As will be observed from the authorized statement of the Marmon company, above quoted, the cars advertised are not cars of the latest model, and have been out of the factory for several months—some of the cars advertised having been heretofore delivered to customers.

This statement is made by authority of the manufacturers, and in the interest of possible Marmon burchasers.

North Carolina and Virginia redeemed, or offered to redeem their paper money at one mill in a dollar. The other states offered a larger percentage. Virginia had $60,000.000 of such paper outstanding; North Carolina, $26,000.000, and, I have never learned just how much Georgia issued. Deflation therefore, which followed the revolutionary war automatically worked itself out in a gradual diminution of value of inflated currency, each holder sustaining a loss as he received and parted with this currency.

Civil War Plan Poor.

"During the civil war, after borrowing all it could borrow in this country, the United States anticipating a short war, issued $400,000,000 of paper money, which recited that it was payable to the bearer on demand, without indicating what kind of a dollar was intended, Congress also, at the same time, declared this paper money legal tender for all debts, public and private, and thus unconsciously destroyed the credit of the United States in Europe. This paper money greenbacks, began to depreciate, but, unfortunately, instead of expressing its depreciation as a depreciation, it was expressed in the declaration that gold was at a premium. Gold can no more goabove par than a yardstick can extend itself beyond 36 inches. It was the greenback that was below par.

"Congress quickly followed the issue of this $400,000,000 of green."

Tools Are Stolen.

A large assortment of tools was stolen from a locked shed owned by E. V. Sayer, of 19 East Mitchell street, some time Friday night, according to the report he gave the police early Saturday morning. The thief entered the tool house by smashing a lock. Officers J. A. Allen and James Pope investigated.

Master of the Highway

The world's stock car record for speed now belongs to Paige—and Paige alone.

When our "Daytona 6-66" model thundered down the beach at 102.8 miles per hour, it proved itself not only a marvelously fast car, but a superlatively good car.

Only giant strength and endurance could survive such a heroic test.

So these are qualities that you will find in any Paige 6-66.

We invite you to take one thorough demonstration behind the exclusive 6-66 motor and make a record of the tests.

Then ride in any other car-at any price-and compare the results.

Macon, Ga., April 16.—(Special.)—
A lot of negroes in Georgia think they are peonage victims, when, as a matter of fact, they are entirely wrong, according to Assistant District Attorney E. Clem Powers, who has been flooded during the last few days with complaints from negroes all over south Georgia. Negroes have sprung up in Dooly county. Oglethorpe, and even Bibb, who have recounted in blood-curdiling terms cruel treatment, which puts them in the class of peons, so they claim. And today the unsuspected county of Early was added to the list.

A negro dressed in a baggy brown suit with a red eye and scar on his head shuffled into the office of Assistant United States District Attorney Powers.

"I wants to see the judge," the negro announced.

"You don't look like a dead negro," the visitor ventured.

"No. sah," he answered without cracking a smile. "I just happened to come to—dat's all dat saved disniggah."

"Knocked Him Dead."

The negro gave his name as Richard Guyton and said that for live years he had worked on a farm near Blakely. He declared that his employer hit him over the head with a big stick that knocked him dead.

When asked about the investigation being carried on by Hooper Alexander. United States district attorney, as to the charges of alleged cruel treatment to the Bibb county convicts. Mr. Powers said: "I have had no complaint of cruelty at the Bibb county convict camp. That is a matter exclusively of state jurisdiction, and this office can have nothing to do with it."

SOUTHEAST BRANCH OF BERG BROTHERS

Berg Brothers, of New York, for thirty-eight years leading whole sale dealers in general lines of notions and ribbons, and manufacturers of rompers, and well known to thousands of merchants over the south, have decided to open a branch in Atlanta.

S. Finkelstein, district manager, who will be the local manager, making the necessary arrangements for the establishing of this new branch.

Before selecting Atlanta as his company's headquarters for the southeast, Mr. Finkelstein made a thorough canvass of the territory, and with the assistance of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce gathered the data necessary for a final decision. With branches already established in Boston, Philadelphia. Louisville and New Orleans, the attention of the Berg Brothers concern was attracted to Atlanta as the logical point from which to cover this section of the country. The investigation that followed confirmed their first impressions with the result that Atlanta secures the branch of another nationally-known house, thereby increasing its long lead as the big central market of the southeast.

Commodious quarters have been secured on South Forsyth street and Mr. Mosbarcher, with a competent force, has been put in charge.

Some FACTS About

Here are authentic figures from the Ford factory at Detroit. They show you just how many Ford cars and trucks have been built each month since January 1, 1921 and how many have been sold to retail customers, in the

	Produced	Delivered to Retail Customers
JANUARY FEBRUARY MARCH	29,883 35,305 61,886	57,208 63,603 87,221
Total Production	127,074	Total Retail Sales 208,032

showing that actual sales for the first three months of 1921 exceeded production by 80,958 Ford cars and trucks!

April requisitions already specify 107,719 additional cars and trucks and the estimated April output of the factory and assembly plants combined calls for only 90,000!

These facts clearly show that the demand for Ford products is growing much faster than manufacturing facilities to produce and were it not for the dealers' limited stocks, which are now being rapidly depleted, many more customers would have been compelled to wait for their cars. It will be only a matter of weeks, therefore, until a big surplus of orders will prevent anything like prompt deliveries.

If you would be sure of having your Ford car or truck when you want it, you should place your order now. Don't delay. Phone us or drop us a card.

LINCOL

THE qualities of the Lincoln Motor Car are such that if it were produced under the conditions and by the methods employed in building Europe's finer cars, it would be necessary to more than double the Lincoln selling price.

Reversing the method of comparison, Europe's finer cars could be duplicated in quantities in the Lincoln factories, by the Lincoln organization, with Lincoln equipment, by Lincoln methods, and profitably marketed at less than the Lincoln selling price.

And it is not too much to say that Europe's finer cars would be measurably bettered if produced in the Lincoln way.

The trade anticipate a further improvement next week, as indications point to improved business in Manchester just as soon as the coal strike is settled. Another encouraging feature was an advance in the basis in the Atlantic states with more inquiry from the Carolina mills.

now York, April 16.—(Special.)—Since our last circular the market has been under the depressing influence of: First, the failure of the German reparation magnitude in the transportation workers. Should the efforts mow being made by all parties concerned to bring about an early settlement in the near future fail, then the situation become very serious and its final effect on the cotton trade would naturally prove more or less unsettling. On the other hand, a quick and satisfactory settlement would undoubtedly prove a great stimulus toward unanimous that prices are low, but views are still very much divided on the question of just when and how any material improvement can be looked for. Exchange is Irregular.

Exchange was as irregular as securities, with startling rising on the first view that the British strike would be settled and then slumping badly on the adverse change. The feature of this market was Italian lire which made a new high record for recent months.

The automobile business, which many might have supposed would be one of the last to show any improvement, has been very active for several weeks, with which heavy buying of some makes in some sections of the country that a few companies have already sold their full production for a number of months in advance. The woolen goods business has also had a very good volume of business recently, with other textiles reporting fair improvement. Throughout the business news, however, there are indications that the total improvement in all lines combined has not been of much consequence in the last month or two, but this is explained in part by the fact that some industries have actually gone backwards in the last few weeks in their business conditions. It is the general impression that it would take something of a definite nature such as a reduction in federal reserve rediscount rates or the repeal of the excess profits laws to greatly accelerate the improvement in general business. Without such aid in restoring business confidence, it is probable that the improvement will be very slow.

In the face of these conditions almost all the covering orders in the market were brought out, but as the evidence in fa or of the bulls continued to pile up, the sellers abandoned the field, and not even the proverbial week-end protit-taking served to check the upward tendency.

Wheat was most affected by the trade news, but corn and oats followed their leader, and provisions easily climbed the barrier of an easier tone in hogs by the strength of general trade factors.

At the start of the wheat market there was a rush to buy because of the progress of the emergency tariff bill.

With May starting at $1.24 and July at $1.08, the boosting continued through the first hour. and now that the cost of living is coming down, the labor board must recognize existing conditions and authorize a reduction in railway wages. Since the Edropean war began, August 1, 1914, freight rates have been increased many times. Business cannot go on paying the high rates now being charged. And the railroads cannot reduce rates without reducing wages. Unless railway wages are reduced we will have a situation such as that now existing in England. In that country the average citizen is being taxed to pay the high war-time wages to coal miners that are not justified by selling prices and general trade conditions. Our railroads must be self-supporting. Railway employees cannot be paid higher wages than are being received in other lines of industry.

Diamonds for April Birthday Gifts--A Grand Opera Display

The Diamond is generally conceded to be the most beautiful, as it is the most important of precious stones. A few other stones exceed it in value, weight for weight, but in total importance as an article of commerce other gems are hardly to be compared with the Diamond.

The Diamond is the birthstone for April.

"She who from April dates her years, Diamonds shall wear, lest bitter tears For vain repentance flow; this stone Emblem of innocence is known."

In the Middle Ages the Diamond was considered a talisman against danger, and gave hardiness and fortitude to its wearer.

Giving birthstones is the outgrowth of the ancient tradition that the destinies of individuals are governed by certain gems which influence the various months. The Diamond is the emblem of Innocence and Purity.

We are showing new Diamond Jewelry, Aquamarine and Tourmaline Jewelry-a special display containing Bracelet Watches, Bar Pins, Brooches, Pearl Necklaces, Link Bracelets, Rings, Vest and Shirt Sets. Opera Glasses and other articles especially appropriate for Grand Opera.

Atlanta Society Completing Arrangements for Festivities Incident to Grand Opera Week

Engagement books and librettos are the best sellers in Atlanta book stores just now, and the only reading in which most people are finding time to indulge. With opera only a week off, the inevitable excitement anticipating the gala week of the year which turns the eyes of the south Atlantaward, and makes Atlanta the musical center of the country's map for the time being, has taken hold.

Telegrams are bringing the date and the hour of the arrival of opera visitors from everywhere, and hotels, clubs, dance orchestras and caterers are being rapidly booked up.

The Metropolitan Opera company, the greatest organization of its kind in the world, is starting on its final week in New York, and Saturday night will see the entrainment of orchestra, chorus and executives for their annual trip south.

The stars of the opening performance—Rosa Ponselle; the sensational new tenor, Benjamin Gigli, and the new baritone, Guiseppe Danise, who is said to run Gigli a close race for the honors in the opening night opera, "Andrea Chenier," with Rosa Ponselle, brilliant among the company's prima donnas, as well as Roberto Moranzoni, conductor, will also be among the Sunday afternoon arrivals, their coming timed for a night's rest before the initiation of the eleventh season of grand opera with Giordano's music drama of the French revolution, which will have its premier in Atlanta Monday night.

All will be at the Georgian Terrace hotel, and many dinners are planned for that evening at the Terrace, the presence of the stars adding an extra incident of social interest.

Driving Club to Open

New Ballroom. In the meantime, the presence of a number of visitors will be made the occasion for a sort of "little season" of gayety the coming week, of the new ballroom at the Piedmont Driving club on and the opening of the new ballroom at the Piedmont Driving club on Saturday will mark a brilliant culmination of the week, as well as the beginning of the Driving club's opera calendar of entertainment.

The new ballroom, bigger, more beautiful than the one it replaces, will be the scene of a dinner-dance Saturday night, which is planned to be of fitting elaboration to measure up to the special occasion. An orchestra of eight pieces, considered one of the best exponents of modern dance music in the country, and engaged for the whole of opera week, will make its initial appearance at the opening dinner-dance, and the cream and gold of the ballroom deceration will form effective background for a tasteful but restrained use of foliage and flowers. A special menu will be a pleasing incident of this first expression of hospitality in a new center of the social life which is expected to fulfill the delightful traditions of the ballroom it succeeds.

Among those entertaining on Saturday flight will be Colonel and Mrs. W. L. Peel, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Smythe, whose party will be a compliment to their sister, Mrs. Francis X. O'Neal, of Charleston; Miss Janet Evins, who will entertain for her guest, Miss Janet Webster, of Shadian, N. Plans Formulated.

"Plans are being made to beautify the yards in places where shrubbery can be used to advantage. Much of the success of the association is due to the spiendid co-operation of the teachers and the efficient principal, Miss Lucile Nolan, who is never too busy nor too tired to be consulted, or to do her share of the work in any project for the betterment of the association, which, of course, uses its money for the benefit of the school. The rest room for the teachers has been renovated and furnished with new curtains and new rug. The walls of the rooms are being kalsomined, much to the delight of the teachers and pupils. The relief committee, of which Miss Nolan is chairman, has furnished shoes and books to needy children.

"The sum realized from the sale of sandwiches, weiners and cookies continues to grow each week, and Wednesday of each week has been set apart for this special feature. Mrs. W. J. The General Federation And Collective Work

Women were through so many ages accustomed to doing their work individually; to living their lives in a circumscribed area and among a circumscribed group of people; to limiting their interests to the things in the home and of their families and friends, that the wonder should be, not that they find it difficult to act collectively, to broaden their horizon of interest and to embrace the modern opportunities for organized activity, with its infinitely greater influence, but that they have developed so wide a vision and have learned in a comparatively few years the tremendously multiplied value of organized

Their growth in this line is almost commensurate with that of men, although the women have been at it a shorter time. A case in point is the growth in appreciation on the part of the individual clubs in the General Federation of Women's Clubs of the value of the national organization to women at large and the individual

Even in the smallest communities the women who have formed clubs, and, through banding themselves together to work for common interests and the interests of their town, have cleaned up the town, ridding it of eye-sores that they would never have had the courage as individuals to ask the city fathers to eliminate; who have secured schools where there were none, or built better ones; who have built libraries and have brought themselves and the women in the neighboring country within touch with what other women are doing, making their lives easier and brighter and the lives of those around them; these women have looked out then from heir comparative isolation to the advantages of state affiliation, and they are realizing every day more keenly what is women's power in national organization. The federation director for California, Mrs. Robert J Burdette has put it all very plainly in a visualization of the federation scheme, which is enlisting the interest of the club women of the whole country and she has been asked to send a sketch of it to every state president and state director for general circulation.

"Club federation," said Mrs. Burdette, in a recent interview in The General Federation News, "implies the doing together that which cannot be effectually accomplished by the individual or even in small There has frequently been much 'lost motion' in this effort by the attempt to do 'odds and ends' of unrelated work

"If accomplishment is to be the end and aim of club life the result should be an increment of value to all life. With this belief the General Federation of Women's Clubs has sought to present an outline of suggested work that is related and that approaches life from four

'This outline of study and work is presented for the, first, practical side through the department of applied education; second, perfection of conditions through the department of public welfare; third, stimulation to duty through the department of American citizenship and legislation; fourth, cultural attainments and adornments of life through the department of fine arts. Believing the results will be worthy of record, a department of press and publicity is also a definite

"If every club and county and state will build its program and departments to this general outline there will be a uniform preparation and strong background for any definite piece of work which this large and splendid body of organized womanhood might desire to

"Of course, no individual or club can take the program in its entirety, but it is most desirable that whatever you do, you realize that it is resisted to the whole fine scheme and that 'team-work,' the power of doing it together, is being instrumental for the furtherance of something beyond the interest of the individual. Thus we become possessed of the virtue of ceasing to be only locally-minded."

Mrs. Burdette's visualization of the federation's outline of work, as defined under the recent reorganization, is in chart form, and appears elsewhere on this page

In smaller form Mrs. Burdette has cleverly outlined the value of every woman's complete co-operation to make the federation function. It is as follows

TO MAKE THE FEDERATION FUNCTION

Every National Chairman
Must visualize the forty-eight states and send out uniform instructions to state chairmen.

Every State Chairman Must see the whole state and give careful directions to district chairmen. Every District Chairman

Must see her whole district and pass her directions to each county chairman.

Each County Chairman · Must know her county and pass her directions to every club chairman. Each leader is equally responsible for success. Don't Break the Chain!

Women of Detroit

Are Urging Oak

As National Tree

The movement inaugurated by the Department of conservation department of the Detroit Federation of Women's clubs to make the oak tree the official tree of our country, this movement recently submitted for approval to the General Federation, is the occasion for an essay on the oak written by a talented young woman in Columbus, Ga., Miss Helen Dennis, who was a pupil last year in the journalism class at Wesleyan, conducted by Miss M. Virginia Garner, state chairman of literature.

Praise for Oak.

Miss Dennis' encomium of the oak is in part as follows:

"What could be more typical of American than the oak, its romantic history and staunch endurance; its refuge for the weak, shelter for the oppressed, defense for the defenseless and its divine beauty, for to gaze upon the oak one sees all the fine lines drawn by the graver's tool of the great God who has time to spend in making the oak more beautiful than inlaid work of pearl or onyx. It is a symbol of the glory of God.

"Aside from sentiment there are practical reasons why the oak tree should be the national tree of our country. It is found over nearly the whole of the northern hemisphere and grows more nearly over all parts of the United States than any other one tree. The oak is self-preservative and self-restorative. Nature has promised that the oak shall recreate itself, thus dispensing, in a large measure, with the problem of forest conservation. Acorns, which are prematurely a three-celled overy and later develop into a one-celled, are so numerous that their distribution by wind and other natural agents provide amply for the 'survival of the fittest."

"The commercial value of oak is such that the immensity of the subject bars it from being discussed here, but it could well be said, to return to the aesthetic, that kings have wainscoted their palace walls with these exquisitely straited woods; and pictures that were priceless have been framed in its tawny loveliness, but no picture can be more beautiful than the natural graining of the oak—for God was the artist oaks than any other state of the union.

"Enscrolled on the roll of fame by the American Forestry association is the Wesley oak on St. Simon's Island, where the famous John Wesley, founder of the Methodist qhurch, preached, 180 years ago. The gifted Sidney Lanier, Georgia's renowned poet, wrote the immortal "Marshes of Glynn" as he sat beneath an oak tree which now stands in Brunswick. Another oak which has become famous is that which is known as the "Toombs Oak" in Athens. Athens is also the possessor of the most noteworthy of all Georgia tree. It is the white oak there which bears the distinction of being the only trae in the world which owns itself. Its former owner, Colonel William H. Jackson, by regularly attested and recorded deed conveyed to this tree 'entire possession of itself, and of the land within eight feet of it on all sides." "Other states than Georgia have reasons, of sentiment, to prefer the oak for it has played quite a role in American history. Among the trees of special note are: The oak at Charleston, S. C., under which the Declaration of Independence was read; Hartsfords Charter oak. Wye president of Sans Souci club; Mrs. Entertains Mrs. Hays.

Dodge, Miss Evelyn Hamrick and others.

The meeting was held in the spacious drawing room of the school. The girls discussed many school topics, among them the subject of the dance which is to be given at Woodberry by the members of the Beta Ki Pi in the near future.

Another interesting feature in which some Woodberry girls took part was the collecting of funds at the Oglethorpe and Michigan baseball game last Wednesday afternoon, for the purpose of sending the old veterans to Albany, Ga. The girls did this for the U.D. C. They were chaperoned by Mrs. Cherry, Mrs. Woodward and other prominent members of the D. A. R. Quite a large sum was collected.

Miss Nell Keywood returned on Sunday, April 10, from a week-end trip to Charleston, S. C. While there she visited some friends.

Miss Ena Egline also returned last Sunday.

Novelty Dance.

A great deal of interest is centered in the dance to be given by the Young Women's Hebrew association on Wednesday night, April 20, at 8:30 'oclock.

The proceeds of this event will be devoted to the funds for the summer camp, which is to be known as Camp Victor.

One of the features of this dance will be prize conests. There will be a prize waltz and an elimination dance.

Another very interesting and enjoyable feature will that Zaza, the famous, who has been secured for this special occasion, will tell the past, present and future of any of the guests for a nominal sum, which will be devoted to the camp.

Refreshments will be served; a very good orchestra has been procured, and everyone is assured a good time.

This takes years from your appearance, and is always sure and positive in its work if you will apply it liberally, every day.

And If the Hair Is Thinning

Strengthening and enlarging the roots of the hair is one of the real secrets of forcing hair to grow, something which has heretofore not been fully realized. Merely stimulating the surface tissue of the scalp will not stimulate the hair growth to the extent desired. By the new method just mentioned hair can be forced to grow several inches a month. Hair will stop falling as if by magic. The new vigor of the hair will be quickly noticed, and all bald spots will be soon entirely filled out with new sprouts. This can all be easily obtained by the simple use of betaquinol, which can be secured at any drug store in the original one-ounce package. This can be mixed at home with a half pint of bay rum and a half pint of water, or with witch hasel, if you prefer. It contains no oil whatever.

Tabler-Willoughby.

Of sincere interest to their many friends was the marriage of Miss Mamie Eleanor Tabler and William Welch Willoughby, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Tabler, in Sellis avenue at 5:30 o'clock Saturday, April 9.

The reception rooms were artistically decorated with pink and white carnations, palms and ferns. Praceding the ceremony Miss Flofinie Landers sank "I Love You Truly." Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Grace Davis, accompanied by William Little with the violin.

The ceremony was performed by the lev. C. F. J. Tate, of the Gordon Street Baptist church, to the soft accompaniment of "Hearts and Flowers" before an altar of palms, ferns and smilax, on which were burning white tapers in crystal candelabra. Tall baskets filled with bride's roses, carnations and ferns, tied with tulle, were placed on either side of the altar.

Misses Cornelia Culver and Louia Nixon, the bridesmaids, were charming an shell-pink organdle frocks trimmed with panels of ruffles and hand-made organdie flowers with becoming hats of the same shade. They carried bouqets of pink and lavender sweetpeas tied with lavender tulle.

Mrs. W. H. Freeman, Jr., the only sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was lovely in a gown of ciel blue chiffon over gold taffeta with trimmings of gold and blue. Her hat was of the same smade and maline, combined with delicately tinted straw. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, was met at the altar by the groom, attended by his best man, Harold Youmans. She was a picture of griffsh loveliness in her going-away costume of faun-colored tricotine embroidered in the same shade. Her hat was a chic model of copper-colored horsehair braid, and her attractive costume was completed with a corsage of orchid showered with liles of the valley.

At th concluson of the ceremony Robert N. Hughes drank the health and future happiness of the bride's elder sister.

It was the intention of General Canby commander of "District No. 1," with headquarters at Richmond, to utilize this building for a negro school under the Freedman's bureau, but it later became a public school for the city of Richmond and would doubtless have continued in some municipal use but for the idea conceived by the Daughters of the Confederacy of perpetuating the ideals of the confederacy in the home of its president. It was in February, 1890, that this idea of making it a memorial hall of the southern cause was carried out under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Bryan, president of the Hollywood Memorial association, and other patriotic ladies of the city.

The city of Richmond gave the building to the Confederate Memorial Literary society in 1890, and it was formally delivered on June 3, 1894. Then the important work was to repair the building in large part by a bazar held in the First Regiment armory, by which 30,000 was realized for this and the soldiers' and sailors' monument. On the 22d of February, 1896, the building was opened, the day being chosen because "it was the birthday of the great rebel president and the inaurural at Richmond of the great president of the confederacy" From the small collection of relics shown at its opening, the museum has become the greatest in the south. Among its priceless relics are the Davis, Lee, Jackson and Start collections, intimate reminders of our great leaders; the original parchment of the constitution of the confederate states, the table on which the ordinance of seesion was signed, the great seal in the greaters and Mrs. J. C. Thompson will be in charge of the hall.

Good. The wager is accepted, and the spirits resume their chorus of praise. Act 1—The drama opens on Easter Sunday, at Frankfort-on-the-Main. Crowds of people of all conditions movein and out the city gates. Among them appears a gray friar, an object of both reverence and dread to those near him. The aged Dr. Faust and his pupil Wagner descend from a height and enter upon the scene, followed by the friar, whose movements they discuss. Faust returns to his laboratory, still followed by the friar, who, unheeded, enters with him, and conceals himself in an alcove. Faust gives himself to meditation, and upon opening the sacred volume, is startled by a shriek from the friar as he rushes from his place of concealment, Faust makes the all-potent "sign of Solomon," when Mefistofele throws off his disguise, and in his own person appears in the garb of a knight, with a black cloak upon his arm. In reply to Faust's questionings he declares himself the spirit that denieth all things, desiring only the complete ruin of the world, and a return to chaos and night. He offers to make Faust the companion of his wanderings, upon certain conditions, to which the latter agrees, saying: "If thou will bring me one hour of world and myself before me-if I may find cause to say to Instoleie promises to do what he can, and bids him haste, for the infernal steeds are ready for flight. He opens the cell, and Faust enters it. Margaret thinks the jailers have come to release her, but at length recognizes her lover. She describes what followed his desertion of her, and begs him to lay her in death beside her loved ones. Faust entreats her to fly with him, and she finally consents, saying that in some far distant isle they may yet be happy. The voice of Mefistofele in the background recalls her to the reality of the situation. She shrinks away from Faust, prays to Heaven for mercy, and dies, while the voices of the celestial choir are heard singing softly, "She's saved." Faust and Mefistofele escape, as the executioner and his escort appear in the background.

Gloria Swanson Tells of Their Relation to Outside World.

BY GLORIA SWANSON.

It is often said that players for he motion picture screen live in a world apart, insular and sufficient unto themselves. But while this is so in a measure, it is not wholly true. For I know that they take a keen interest in the affairs of the great world outside and that they are always ready to do their share in upholding any worth-while novement or supporting any worthy sayse.

During the great war, it will be recalled, the motion picture artists were foremost in their efforts to help in government propaganda, in making the great loan drives successful and in every possible man-making the great loan drives successful and in every possible manner.

It is true that the work is so exacting in some respects that our waking thoughts and often our nightly dreams are confined to the professional duties.

The screen actress has a thousand extraneous details which are, nowever, pertinent to her work. She must prepare for her gowns, all the other features of her wardrobe; she must take care to be always a little in advance—or a great deal in advance, as the case may be—of the prevailing modes, for she knows that the picture then being made may not be released for months to come—and styles change with the winds of chance.

She must seek continually new effects in costuming, in the dressing of her hair, in the modes and manners of tomorrow. She must do much reading outside of the play on which she is engaged, for her imagination must always be kept alive—and, of course, this appeals to the actor as well as the actress.

An imagination is a tremendously necessary thing to success in any line, but in the artistic professions is indispensable. The screen play-ner must be able to visualize, just as the scenarist and director. It is necessary to keep abreast of the times by reading the daily news and good literature is another important factor in her success.

Good music is always a help and listening to it or playing one's self will often develop inspiration which will serve in the consummation of a desired piece of action.

Good music is always a help and listening to it or playing one's self will often develop inspiration which will serve in the consummation of a desired piece of action.

No, we are not by any means insensible to what is going on about us. We have our own friends and they are naturally drawn largely from our own ranks, but we strive to live and deport ourselves just as other human beings, which is sometimes harder because the public at large is prone to regard us as different. But we are not—we are real people, and we try our best to remain so.

Certain relaxation is essential on the basis of the familiar adage affout "all work and no play." The natural inclination of the individual comes into play there, and what come chooses as a means of enjoyment may not appeal to another.

But the film player—as every professional I have known practically—is gregarious. He loves to associate with his kind and likes the social gatherings which result ofttimes in lasting friendships that are so helpful and do so much to make life worth while.

I have no comment to make regarding the sins of the few which reflect upon us all, the penalty of being more or less in the public eye. I have found that worthwhile people in the profession are like the worth-while people—are the arbitrers and their sign of "thumbs up or thumbs down" marks our fates. We rise of fall by public androval and our best ef is turning it to reality. She is Sylvia is Breamer. To be sure she is not playing Juliet exactly as conceived by Will Shakespeare. Another Will figures largely in the chance—one Will Rogers, nationally famous for his humor and his homeliness, who essays the role of Romeo. She calls him Rum and he calls her Ju, and they get along together famously. Will is a little uncertain of his doublet and hose. When he looks down at his tights he declares he knows now what it feels like to be on the list of "those missing." But Sylvia, with her ropes of pearls and flowing silks, makes a Juliet that even Shakespeare would have approved. All this happens in "Doubling for Romeo," now in the throes of production at the Goldwyn studio.

Sylvia is perhaps the ideal Juliet.

Sylvia is perhaps the ideal Juliet. Her beauty needs no description. She has long been one of our most popular leading ladies. She is tall and slender and dark, with just a touch of melancholy and tenderness in her beauty that we have come to expect in our Juliets. She has an easy grace of carriage, and the knack of wearing costumes successfully, without thought of them.

Because she was born in Australia she has that rather imposing enunciation, the proud manner of the English. But she boasts, even in these blue times, of her Ameri-like in the first part of the them.

Cast Includes Lois Wilson, Jack Holt and Lila

A breath-taking story and a brilliant cast are the combination promised in William De Mille's latest picture, "Midsummer Madness," three days commencing Monday. The story, adapted from Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "His Friend and His Wife." Mr. Hamilton is well known as the author of "Scandal," "The Blindness of Virtue," and many other successful plays and stories

"The Blindness of Virtue," and many other successful plays and stories.

The plot centers around two young married couples who are close friends. One of the wives is so lavish with the outward expressions of her love-for her husband that he becomes a bit tired of her. Now that she is so completely won, he longs for new fields to conquer. His friend's wife, on the other hand, is blessed with a husband who is more interested in business than in her; she craves romance. So the over-loved husband and his friend's under-loved wife are attracted to each other. In a moment of folly, they commit an indiscretion that nearly ruins four lives.

The cast of "Midsummer Madness" includes such sterling screen players as Lois Wilson, Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Conrad Nagel. The picture has been sumptuously produced and abounds in moments of unusual dramatic strength.

Of course, there will be a good comedy shown as an added feature, and this time it's a new two-reel Christie special, entitled "Kiss Me, Caroline."

Alexander M. Smith, popularly known on the frozen barrens of the Far North country as "Yukon Smith," has an important role in "The Golden Snare," soon to be released by Associated First National. He handles the whiplash over a fifteen-team of strapping malamutes in several stirring scenes of the in several stirring scenes of the story.

Doctors of Laurel and Hattiesburg who waited on the son of J. T. Childers, gave him up to die. He had open sores on his face, hands and legs. His throat was inflamed and full of scabs. He suffered terrible pain in his stomach, arms and legs.

But the boy's parents heard of Baughn's Pellagra Treatment and decided to try it. Soon after the treatment was started an improvement was noticed. The pain was relieved and the sores started to heal. In a few months the patient was completely cured.

What is Left of Him-When the Day's Work is Over

Why is it that many a man is struggling, toiling, trying to get ahead but at the end of each day, he is practically a physical wreck, while another man does as much or more work; and makes ten times more money and comes home to his family smiling, full of life and "feeling bully?"

This great difference in men may be due solely to the difference in their blood. Today about one person out of every three is said to suffer more or less from the great devitalizing weakness brought on by malnutrition or lack of sufficient nourishment; which is caused not by lack of food but often by lack of sufficient organic iron in the blood to enable us to get the full strength out of our food.

Will Greatly Relieve Heavy Traffic on Lines. To Add Exchange.

More than 2700 telephone numbers were changed or added to the telephone system in Atlanta at midnight Saturday, when 21 subscribers' switchboard positions, 4 trunking positions at the Hemlock office, and 9 auxiliary switchboard positions at the Ivy office were placed in service. This is one of the largest additions of central office equipment made in recent years by the Southern Ball company in Atlanta, and the cost amounts to approximately $150,000. Other and larger additiones to the Atlanta equipment are under way.

Simultaneously with the introduction of this new equiment, $40 subscribers' lines were changed from the Ivy office to the Hemlock office, and 239 from the Main office to the Ivy office. The transfer of those subscribers adjacent to the Hemlock area from Ivy to Hemlock, and of those subscribers in the Main area adjacent to Ivy, was necessary in order to get the full benefit of the new facilities and make it possible to serve applicants in other parts of the Main and Ivy areas.

2,700 Other Changes.

2,700 Other Changes.

There were 2,700 other changes in telephone numbers caused by additions, discontinuations, changes of location and of call numbers resulting from changes of location.

The new equipment for the Hemlock office was originally planned for completion about a year ago, and was designed to relieve the congestion and demand for service which had been foreseen. Owing to manufacturing and financial difficulties, the installation of the equipment has just been completed.

The extensions and readjustments which are made possible by the additional central office department will enable the company to install telephones for many who could not be served. It will relieve somewhat the congestion due to the heavy traffic, and is expected to aid materially in the efforts to further improve the service.

Transfer of Phones. Transfer of Phones.

The transfer of more than 800 subscribers' lines from Ivy to Hemlock, will give some relief for the installation of new stations in the Ivy office area and a similar transfer of more than 200 lines from Main to Ivy will, to that extent, relieve the congestion in the Main office area. Members of the Oglethorpe Players club who have been picked for the castes of the three original one-act plays written by members of the club to be presented at the Atlanta theater Friday night, May 6. are now holding daily rehearsals. Work was started on the plays about the first of March.

The plan of the players to produce their own plays instead of one by a well-known playwright is original at least so far as southern colleges are concerned. The plan is merely temporary, according to an announcement by President Ernest Moore, but if the plays are well received by the Atlanta audience the custom will be adhered to.

At the first of the year each member of the drama class at Oglethorpe wrote a one-act play and from that three were chosen.

The plays selected are "Arranged by the Family." by B. Wooten Colleie: "The Man From the Agency." by Richard H. Armstrong, and "The Interrupted Chess Game," by Parker

M. ASHBY JONES Unity vs. Conformity.

At the weekly union services reports from each congregation, inspirational messages, and united prayer and praise, produced a common Christian consciousness unequalled in the experience of the city. In immediate results which can be told in figures, this is the most successful revival in the history of the city. Up to my last report more than fifteen hundred had been added to the churches. having little evidence of desire for uniformity of ritual, oneness of polity, or conformity of creed. Indeed in matters theological, men differ perhaps more widely than ever before, and there is an ever-increasing demand in the churches for a greater independence of thinking. No! Deeper than any intellectual processes, or even any intellectual processes, or even any intelligent propaganda for a more perfect efficiency, is evidence of a more vivid consciousness of kinship among the disciples of Jesus.

A Missionary Army.

And it seems to me that this con-

And it seems to me that this consciousness became vital in the presence of the American army. It was the boy in khaki who aroused that sense of brotherhood. This army in its composition was essen-tially human. There poured into its ranks every section and every sect, every tongue and every tribe. Boys from the wind-swept hills of old New England, and boys from the limitless horizon of our western plains; boys in whose veins throbbed the blood of revolutionary fathers who had won their freedom in sacrificial service, and boys of allen tongue and traditions whose fathers had been lured to these shores by the promise of our freedom. There were rich boys and poor boys, educated boys and ignorant boys, but all of them were boys permeated with a passion for human freedom. It was a missionary ts ranks every section and every permeated with a passion for human freedom. It was a missionary army, for its ranks were permeated with a consciousness of being sent

The evangelistic campaign conducted by all the Christian churches in Atlanta, which has just closed, was unique because of its unity of spirit and variety in method. All the churches, through the executive committee of the Christian council, planned this united effort, but insisted that each local church should conduct its own meetings according to its own ideas and tastes.

At the weekly union services re-

Now we must meet this world spirational messages, and united spirit with a world program. And when we fairly face our task we know that no portion of the church equalled in the experience of the city. In immediate results which can be told in figures, this is the most successful revival in the history of the city. Up to my last report more than fifteen hundred had been added to the churches. I venture to interpret the spirit of these meetings.

A New Challenge.

Of course, there is nothing new in the splendid impulse which has stirred our Christian churches toward a more perfect unity of service. It is the new emphasis upon this desire which challenges us, and the fact that the impulse itself is more widespread than ever before, possessing almost every person with whom one talks.

enough to include every self-sacrt-ficing service, and broad enough to challenge every Christly impulse to challenge every Christly impulse possessing almost every person with whom one talks.

What is the meaning of this new emphasis? I am convinced that it is not ecclesiastical in its origin, having little evidence of desire for uniformity of ritual, oneness of polity, or conformity of creed. In deed in matters theological, men deed in matters theological, men longer call to men's selfish lears to enter upon an enterprise of unself-ish ministry. We ought to know that we can't lure men into the church by promises of bribes, and then expect to areuse them to en-thusiasm by a call to sacrifice.

Denominational Inspirations. If we go, back to the teachings of Jesus we will find that He never made that appeal. . As a man who Himself faced death without fear. He looked into the eyes of men and dared the nobility of their spirits to follow Him along the via dolo-rosa beneath the weight of a cross.

Briand Grimly Announces Intention to Take Germany "By the Throat" if Treaty Terms Are Ignored—United States and England Will Not Interfere—Coal Area Key to European Industrial Situation and Seizure Will Spell Ruin for Teuton Em-

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS.

Washington, April 16 .- The first and the most important consequence of the Viviani visit is already revealed in the utterances of M. Briand, the French premier. Assured that all German assertions to the contrary were false, and that the United States had not the slightest intention of intervening directly or indirectly on behalf of the Germans, M. Briand has announced with significant celerity that on May 1, if Germany has not changed her attitude France means to take the German "by the throat."

What does this mean? Obviously it might forecast a general advance of allied troops into Germany, a new and far-reaching invasion which would at last end the world war in Berlin instead of at the German frontiers, as happened in 1918. Beyond all debate it lies within the power of France to go to Berlin, despite any resistance of which Germany is now capable and any resistance would be little more

Berlin Excursion Not in Mind.

Yet, judging from present reports from Europe, no excursion to Berlin is at present in French minds. On the other hand, it is clear that so far the allied policy of coercion has failed. Having defied the allies at London, Germany stands solidly by her declaration that she could not and would not accept the allied terms as written at Paris and presented to Simons at London. The extension of allied occupation to a portion of the Ruhr region and the promulgation of new tariff walls between occupied and unoccupied Germany has produced no submission

Upper Silesia

Goes to Poland. In practice the operation would be two-fold, that is 'there would have to be two distinct actions, one n upper Silesia and the other in the Ruhr. But as to upper Silesia the recent plebiscite has much simplified the situation. Not only were illied troops placed in occupation of this district as an incident in the election, but the results of the election were such as to warrant, or rather compel, the transfer of all of the upper Silesia coal area to Poland. While there was a German majority in the whole area, that is the political division of upper Silesia, the Polish majority was decisive in ten of sixteen counties and in these counties are the coal deposits.

The French have only then to insist upon the completion of the set, tlement of the upper Silesian probl tlement of the upper Silesian probilems, by the allocation to Poland of the Polish districts of this former German territory and, automatically, Germany loses control of a source of a little more than a third

Poland on acquiring these coal

In a word to deprive Germany of the Silesian coal fields does not require the use of any more troops or the extension of the area of allied occupation. All that is necessary is to take full advantage of power already available. What is even more interesting is that no additional expense would be required. Indeed, allied troops might dditional expense would be re-uired. Indeed, allied troops might conditions should have been fulfilled, is in sight and Germany, lying flat on the ground and refusing to move, still insolently inquires, "What are you going to do about it?"

French Reply
Fairly Complete.
To this the French reply seems fairly complete. France proposes, for the time being, not a general occupation of Germany, which will permit rance to control the industrial areas of Germany, which will permit rance to control the industrial life of Germany. To put the thing to move the mines, transport the product of the Ruhr coal area would be sent on the ground and refusing pass under French control.

It is obvious, however, that the take over the powerhouse of the German industral plant, the question of whether Germany will have heat, light and power and of the terms under which she shall have them will then rest with Force.

The condition are these. There are in Germany three great coal areas. From these Germany draws not only her domestic supply, which is essental to the operation of all of her own manufacturing and transportation, but a very large item on German export. These three Poles, having entered into control of the Upper Silesia mines, would be in a position to ration all of the adjoining regions, notably Hungary and not impossibly the whole Danublan area. Coal would thus become a precious instrument in the hands of France-Polish policy all over Europe. Not only would France and Poland assure themselves of adequate domestic supply, but they would be able to gather material and rolitical profits from the sale of the surplus to their neighbors.

Germany would, in the meantime.

Germany would, in the meantime, be totally at the mercy of France. She could obtain coal to run her She could obtain coal to run her industries only by coming hat in hand to the French and offering such terms as would satisfy the masters of all of the German coal fileds. A more complete and a more effective method of strangulation it would be difficult to imagine. If it were applied for any appreciable time it would bring Germany to her knees, it would close almost all of her industrial establishments. It industrial establishments. rtunate position which threatens le British as a detail in their own

Now beyond the immediate industrial and political possibilities of French occupation of the Ruhr lie other eventualities which are not overlooked in Paris. France has, by regaining her lost provinces on her eastern boundaries, become the eastern boundaries, become the greatest iron producing nation in Europe. More than half of the total of European iron deposits is now within French frontiers. But France lacks coal. Unless she can find some way of meeting this coal shortage she will ultimately have to barter her iron against German or British coal, but if she could get sufficient coal she would become the greatest steel-making nation in Europe.

France Would Be

Industrial Center. Supposing that France should be able to effect a permanent separation of the Rhine and Rhine regions from Germany, to erect them into some form of separate state, bound to France by economic ties rather than by political chains, but having a common tariff wall, then in no long time France would replace Germany in the industrial world. To cut off the coal from the German market and open the French market to it would at one time smash Germany and lay the conditions for an industrialized France, prepare the way for such a French expansion as took place in Germany between 1870 and 1914.

More than this. If France were in control of German coal, the dependence of Bavaria, of Baden, of Wurtemburg, of the surviving fragment of Austria, upon Prussian Germany and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.—(adv.) gions from Germany, to erect them

Germany was the creation of a common tariff frontier. No present observer can fail to note that the possession by Prussia of practically all of the coal deposits of the Ger-man Reich, insures the subservience of south Germany to the Prussian state. But if the coal areas are taken, the Sarre assigned to France, the upper Silesian to Poland and the Ruhr passed to an international the Ruhr passed to an international control, which in reality would be French, if the Rhineland is separated from Germany by customs frontiers and united to France, not by any annexation, but by tariff agreements, a new situation is instantly created and the old dependence upon Prussia abolished.

Coal to Replace Cannon as Weapon.

may be termed the new policy of may be termed the new policy of France, the policy of Briand rather than Foch, of coal rather than cannon. France has laid aside the ambitious but dangerous program of unlimited military occupations, not only dreadfully expensive in them selves, but calculated to disturb the sensibilities of not a few European nations and awaken charges of Chauvinism and imperialism, which no nation can afford to endure at the present moment. What is necessary is a maximum of result for a minimum of effort and France would need to call no new battalions to the colors to lay hands upon the Ruhr, to cut the feed wires of the bitious but dangerous program of unlimited military occupations, not only dreadfully expensive in them selves, but calculated to disturb the sensibilities of not a few European nations and awaken charges of Chauvinism and imperialism, which no nation can afford to endure at the present moment. What is necessary is a maximum of result for a minimum of effort and France would need to call no new battalions to the colors to lay hands upon the Ruhr, to cut the feed wires of the German power system, to use a simple but not inappropriate simile. ple but not inappropriate simile.

Now what will Germany do? Here one touches the unknown, it is pretty difficult to forecast German policy, since German policy in all crises in recent years had inevitably crises in recent years had inevitably chosen to do the thing most fatal to German interests. It is plain to see what Germany must do to be saved now. Her salvation lies in her own hands. There is no nation in the world now which has the slightest intention of intervening on her behalf. The Viviani mission to Washington is final demonstration of this truth. Washington, like London, has no purpose to play catspaw for German statesmen, who deny war guilt and refuse peace responsibilities.

French Statesmen Saw the Light.

additional expense would be required. Indeed, allied troops might now be recalled and the whole affair turned over to the Poles, a course that would automatically follow the actual transfer of the Polish counties to Poland, as the treaty intended.

As to the Ruhr the problem is a little more difficult. It would be necessary for the allies, and in practice this means the French, to take over some hundreds of square miles of German territory, the most densely populated regions in all of Germany. This would require a certain number of additional troops, not a large force, but perhaps ten or fifteen thousand. With these troops in occupation the whole of the Pulve coal area would the Frence was reactions, which would complete the ruin of France. > the years that followed French defeat in 1870, her position now would be far different. There has been American and British representatives at Paris disclosed it patently, real doubt as to the extent of German capacity to pay, as to the limits of the wise in compelling her to pay. But Germany has mistaken its of the wise in compelling her to pay. But Germany has mistaken the spirit and sought to exploit moderation as stupidity.

Today she has no statesmen who dare tell her the truth. On the contrary, at the moment when the sibility for the war and putting world is gradually reaching per fect agreement that all the risks of Coal to Others.

It is one with all German utterances in the war period, when reasonable peace could have been attained if Germany could have perceived that posses-sion of Belgium, settlement on the basis of Bethmann's famous "warmap" was out of the question. Ger-many is marching to ruin now, as Feared by France.

French criticism of French policy at the conference of Paris, criticy at the conference of raris, criticism which has grown with every week since the treaty of Versailles was signed, has centered about the declaration that this document had contributed to consolidating rather than shaking the structure of Bismarck. French policy in past centuries has always looked at the separation of western and southern Germany from looked at the separation of ern and southern Germany ern and southern Germany from Prussia as the sole method of pre-serving French security. The ad-vance of Prussia to the Rhine was conceived by Europe as a method of holding France in subjection.

At Paris Wilson and Lloyd-George were both committed to the principle of maintaining German unity and the treaty of Versailles did little violence to this concep-tion. France was restrained in the Sarre Poland on the Vistula, to France was saved because France at her moment of terrible danger, after the defeat of 1870-71 had statesmen who saw the truth clear-ly. They perceived that not a natural states are not because france was restrained in the content of the visiting, to the end that a strong Germany might survive defeat, despite all the various declarations since the Paris conference both British and a merican policy at critical recommendations.

But Germany has at all times reckoned upon British and American influences, not alone to save her from partition, but to protect her from payment, to enable her to escape from the consequences on the economic side incident to her destruction of French, Belgian, Italian and Polish industry. German statesmen and people have failed to discriminate between the moderation, the regard for legitiwar and for the reparation of the destruction incident to the war, up to the limit of German capacity.

And in the wider sense it is notice served upon Germany that she is totally mistaken in any assumption that the United States will lift a finger or utter even a whisper to stay the officers of justice, whose mission it will now be to impose and apply the penalties.

But the penalties, already outlined in the foreign press, carry lined in the foreign press, carry to seize and operate the coal mines and market their products in all the world, there will still be sub-stantial returns, while, as I have said, the additional military expense can hardly be considerable. We still live in a coal age, industrially, and coal has been the chief detail in the incredible expansion of Germany economically in the past few decades. Without coal Germany cannot live, work, even exist. But ten or fifteen miles additional advance by the French troops already on the Ruhr will give the allies complete control of the whole Ruhr area, while the Sarre and upper Silesia are already in their hands.

German Folly Invites Ruin.

be deprived of all of the coal supplies coming from the Ruhr and from upper Silesia she would be exactly in the situation of an electric railway abruptly deprived of the power through some disturbance in the power house. Until the power was turned on again the transportation system would be parally for the portation system would be parally for the coming from the Ruhr and from upper Silesia she would be stimulated and, at no distorbance in time a new south Germany of vision and influence who can impose upon their fellow than time a new south Germany of vision and influence who can impose upon their fellow who can impose upon their fellow who can impose upon their fellow than time a new south Germany has at all times for her account, it is still clear that if this occupation enables the for her account, it is still clear that if this occupation enables the obligation of Germany to pay up can influence, not alone to save her from partition, but to protect her from partition, but to p enforce its will. Germany, by her folly is inviting France to effect a similar paralysis of German coal industry and thus of the whole German machine. I know it is suggested that German labor will rebel against such French exploitation of German coal mines. But even in the case of a general strike in the Ruhr, France would be able to find labor in her own Lens districts, where years must pass before mining can be resumed, and in Poland, the course of much Ruhr labor, in any case.

As I have said, German policy

As I have said, German policy must remain a mystery up to moment it is revealed, but the first clear indications of French poli suggest how grave are the events which are likely to come quickly after May 1 if Germany fails heed the final warning, which comes this time from Washington and from that new administration which was, in the German mind, to save Germany from the consequences of her mad assault upon the world and the even greater madness of her methods in that assault. Greater Georgia Tech Campaign

THE ATLANTA NATIONAL BANK has for many years, and at no small expense, advocated the development of the resources of Georgia. With the marvelous agricultural and mineral resources of the State properly developed, Georgia would be as nearly immune from "hard times" as it is possible for any state to be.

In the Heart of Atlanta - the Heart of the South

Ranking in point of value with the natural resources of the State is Georgia Tech. This institution is to the young men of the State and this section, what diversification and intensive cultivation is to agriculture, and what modern machinery is to the mills.

Georgia ranks twenty-second in the industrial states of the Union, but only six states have natural resources equal to those of our state. This discrepancy is because of the fact that we have not trained our boys to convert these resources into finished products.

The small New England States give every boy the opportunity to secure a technical education. The same New England States have made more money off the cotton raised in Georgia than the farmer that raised it received.

The easy, sensible way to correct this condition is for every Georgian to take a direct and personal interest in Georgia Tech. The Greater Georgia Tech campaign will equip this wonderful Southern School to train five thousand men a year. These men will turn our resources into the finished product, and bring added profits to Georgia and to the South.

Organization.

Presuming that satisfactory financial arrangements have been provided for a business there comes the question of its personnel. The buyers are, probably, the first consideration. They should be people who know values, who can sense a "good buy" and who are just as a alert to detect a "quick seller." To do this they must not only know goods, but the people to whom these goods are to be sold. A good business man chooses carefully the people who will spend his money and equally as carefully the employees who will display his wares to a willing and anxious-to-buy public. The salesziri selling the lowest priced articles in the store should be made to realize that a certain amount of the success of the entire business depends just as much upon her individual efforts as it does upon the efforts of a clerk whose salesbook seldom records a sale of less than $100. Let salespeople understand that it is not the amount sold, in dollars and cents, that counts, but the percentage of profit or loss on each sale. An article selling for 5 cents may show just as large percentage of profit as an article selling for fifty or one hundred dollars.

The organization having been per-

The organization having been per fected and the goods placed in the shelves there comes the question of shelves there comes the question of advertising—one of the greatest factors in the business world today. Volumes could be written as to "Best Methods of Advertising." "Advertising sements That Sell," etc., but there are two factors in the advertising game that overshadow all others, i. e. Advertising should be done on what we term a percentage basis and it should be systematized. By percentage basis we mean that a certain per cent of the gross sales of the business should be set aside for advertising nurposes. A business having determined to spend, say, 2 to 5 percent of its receipts for advertising, there comes the question of how the money shall be spent. Just because "Mr. Somebody" with a pleasing.

"Your dealer has it"—the advertise and treasurer of the Enterprise Manufacturing company, anent this situation. "But it certainly is to his interest to see that his stock isn't depleted to such an extent that his employees are forced to admit to customers that the articles they want are out. What's the use of going on with business if there's nothing in the store to sell? And where will the retailer—be when there's no one to buy?

"This is a matter to which the retailer—and the jobber, too—should give careful consideration. They should be encouraged to exercise their own good judgment, instead of giving ear to talk of depression. It's easy to sense conditions in the consumer market and to 'cover up' with sufficient supplies to meet demands the dealer knows should exist—particularly if the goods he sells represent reasonable products.

CREDIT MEN THINK INSURANCE TOO LOW

At the sixth annual conference on foot by a group of young bustness and professional men, headed by Will G. Moore, well-known local attorney, that it is hoped will result in having legislation passed at the next session of the legislature modeled after a bill now pending in the Wisconsin legislature, for a large measure of relief in our housing problem. The bill in question has been passed without opposition by the Wisconsin state senate and it is expected that the Wisconsin assembly will also adopt the measure.

Deep interest has been taken in this matter during the hearings held before the Wisconsin assembly committee on banking and insurance, and leading insurance men, co-operating with civic and business organizations, have perfected a measure that it is felt will have a wide and helpful influence in relieving the housing shortage in that state.

The situation in Wisconsin can certainly be no worse than in Georgia and the growing disposition on the part of the big insurance companies to invest their immense resources in movements for the relief of the shortage of homes all over the country, which has reached an acute and even dangerous stage—when considered from the standpoint of its effect on good citizenship—should be heartly encouraged in this state.

On the one hand is your friend with abundance of money, who cannot be cajoled, threatened, beaten or gassed into paying an ordinary debt.

On the other hand, the poor fellow without a visible dollar—you know him—who is Johnny on the invoice. Money has little to do with either case. It is the breed of the man.

The man who pays is the man who thinks in advance. He never throws the bull nor pitches the bluff, nor writes checks dated tomorrow, but when the bills come in he is there with the coin of the realm.

Explain Your Absence

ear Mrs Adams
I have a very troublesome problem for I have a very troublesome problem for you to solve. Some time ago I met a young man who became very fond of meant menting the last two weeks he has changed very much. He used to call ou me quite frequently. He asked me to meet him, but I had to disappoint him. Now he does not talk to me, and I do not know the reason why. I live about one mile from his home.

Please tell me how to go about winguing back his friendship. BROKEN-HEARTED BROWN EYES DEAR BROKEN HEARTED BROWN

Perhaps the young man is angry because he thinks that you deliberately broke your appointment with him. A ray rate, you owe him an explanation for not keeping it. Write him a note explaining why you could not be there and perhaps he will forgive you.

After that, if he continues to be unfriendly, you should forget all about him, for you will have done your part.

Stay With Your Parents

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I am 16 years of age and my mother is dead. She died when I was 2 weeks old I have three sisters and one brother. My father has married again, and I lead a very unhappy life.

I am not allowed to go anywhere. Boys often sak me to go out with them, but my father will not let me go. I set so tired sitting around the house that I feel like killing myself. I sit and cry for hours and often go two or three days without eating even a slice of bread. I do nothing but worry day after day, and am getting so thin that none of my clothes fit me.

But the worst hurt of all is this: I had beautiful hair, two long golden braids, which every one admired. They were my only pride and joy. One night I sat in my room crying and thinking of my unhappy life and forgot all about the time. When I looked at the clock it was half-past I. Of course, I got into bed as quickly as possible.

The next morning I overslept and was fate for school. I would not have been late but for combing my hair. Of course, my stepmother told my father that I was late. When I told him why he said, "Is that so? Well, I will make it less trouble for you to comb your hair in the future. Then he took the seasors and clipped off my two beautiful braids. Now I do not care what happens. I pray to God every night to let me die.

You are much too young to think of getting married. You should be interested in boys only as friends and not as sweethearts. Perhaps that is part of the reason why your father objects to your going out with the boys. After all, parents usually do what is best for their children.

Do not worry too much about your hair, for it will soon grow again. Beauty questions are not within the scope of my department. If you will address a letter to Mrs. Henry Symes in care of this paper, she will be glad to tell you how to make your hair grow, as well as how to gain some flesh.

To the Anxious Girl

DEAR ANXIOUS GIRL. You may ask the young man You may ask the young man to accompany you to the picnic. You may also invite him to call. It will be better to let him decide whether he will come on Sunday or some evening during the week.

I think that the young man wishes to be friends with you since he shows you such marked attention. You are right in not letting him see that you care a great deal for him.

You have not told me how tall you are, so I cannot tell you how much you should weigh. However, I am inclined to believe that you are a great deal too stout. height, say, 5 feet 4 inches, then you should not weigh more than 128

Remember that your coiffure should suit your surroundings as well as your type of face. Jeweled combs and ex-travagant styles of hair dressing fit into the picture at the evening party. but they are entirely out of place in

The third has a word to say about our dress. "DRESS MODESTLY your dress. AND IN GOOD TASTE." Peek-a-boo waists, bright colors, ribbons and highheeled shoes are neither modest nor in good taste. The girl who relies upon dress to "vamp" her employer is a raiter to the cause of womanhood.

The fourth commandment again is a prohibitive one, "THOU SHALT NOT "SE PERFUMERY." Avoid perfame and highly-scented powders as you would the pest. You see, your tastes may not agree with those of your employer and the other members of his staff who are to be considered as well as yourself. Indulge in perfumes in your home if you will, but save the olfactory organs of your business asso-Commandment number five says " SI-LENCE IS COLDEN - CULTIVATE IT." Be as quiet as possible in the of-fice which you share with another per-son. Refrain especially from all hum-mings, drummings and squeaks. Such things are little short of nerve-racking to the person who is trying to con-to the percentrate.

The sixth commandment is an active one and reads, "HELP YOURSELF"

This includes the doing of all those little services which women are accustomed to have done for them by men if they happen to be around. If you want a window raised, do it yourself. Even a busy "boss" might raise the window for you, but the little aside or his thoughts will not be complimen tary to you.

Number seven comes right down to brass tacks and says, "BE FIT." The nightly pleasures of the butterfly's existence are not for you. The girl who dances until 1 or 2 o'clock each night cannot have a clear head for business the next morning. Your firm is paying for your time and your brains, so give them the best you have

The eighth commandment would make You an optimist. "BE CHEERFUL ABOUT YOUR WORK." Nobody likes the chronic grouch. A "Calamity Jane" in an office is worse than a vlump in the stock market for the man who has been buying for a rise. Do not overdo your cheerfulness, however, by constantly bubbling over with laughter or bursting forth into giggles at improper times.

Commandment number nine is rather heartless, for it says, "DO NOT BE AFRAID OF WORK." The girl who does only what she is paid to do is not worth her salary. Grasp every op portunity for further service and thus make yourself indispensable to your firm or employer.

The last commandment is, important of all. It reads. "LET YOUR BUSINESS DEVELOP YOUR BRAINS." Study the industry with which you are connected. Learn all about its history and its present problems, and you will not be puzzled by trade terms or technical descriptions. Strive to acquire a fund of general in formation and have it on tap so that you may be of real assistance to your employer.

These commandments, if obeyed, will help you to get an ever-increasing return from your "top story," and will develop an ever-increasing capacity for work. Of course, you know that increasing returns and increasing capa-

Mourning

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Does a man wear any kind of mourning for his father? When is it proper to attend social affairs or a dance?

Is it necessary for a man to give up his club, during the period of mourning?

Thank you.

P. M.

DEAR P. M .:

It is not considered good taste for a man to wear mourning. It would be well to decline all invitations to any dances or social affairs for a period of at least six months, however.
You need not give up the comforts of your club.

With such system, it takes practically no time for the hustler to be all finished and dinner half prepared, so she is ready to say gayly off for a day's outing, to work, or wherever she plans to go. Then in the evening, when she returns, it is very gratifying to find dinner started and even half finished.

The business girl who attempts to think at first that the double harnes: will prove too difficult. But girls today have their own small two or four room apartments and armanaging beautifully to keep house at the same time they are efficiently holding down their jobs. To be sure they get up perhaps half an hour earlier in the morning if they have jobs that necessitate their being on hand to punch a time clock. But they have the infinite satisfaction of having real homes, which girls who live in boarding houses and hotels can never have. And the difference in comfort outweighs the difference in work.

One big help is the telephone. If the housewife deals with a respon-sible butcher and grocer who know that she wants good things, she can much time each morningphoning her orders as soon as the tores open. And with a convenient list ready at hand on tablet or kit hen slate, she can also order in this way for two or three days at a time Very often it is possible to cook enough of one vegetable to last for two days and to have a meat that will provide the nucleus of a "made" dish the next night, thus minimizing labor by cooking for two days at one time. Potatoes will keep all day if they are peeled in the morning and then covered with cold water and left in the pot, tho some people prefer saving time by having them boiled without peeling and the skins slipped off after they are cooked.

As for cleaning, that too may be lightened. The first requirement is simplicity of furniture and an absence of dust-catching ornaments. The next is an assortment of laborsaving devices, oiled mops with long handles, etc., so that the necessary work may be done as speedily as possible. Woods that are not as highly finished as walnut or mahogany—such as dark oak—don't catch as much dust and don't need as much, attention. So the selection of furniture made from these will also help. It is no longer necessary to linger hours over housework. Plain furnishings, as many labor-saving devices as can be afforded, a bit of thoe the course of the surface of the surf enough of one vegetable to last for

But a little thought and a little planning will keep everything running well and will allow her to go daily about her affairs with every one asking, "How do you For instance, as soon as she is up, if she is wise, she will start breakfast. Then, while the coffee is bubbling merrily, she can dress, return oning merrily, she can dress, returning to the kitchen in time to finish things up. After breakfast it takes but a few minutes to clear off and a bit of determination to get all the dishes washed, dried and put away in short order. Meanwhile, if there is anything to be started for dinner, such as vegetables that take a long while or a tough cut of meat, it has as can be anorded, a but of thought in arranging appointments for leisure hours and about one day a week of energetic cleaning will keep any house running easily without giving the manager nervous prostration, and will leave time enough for a job of a hobby or for any outside work. If, on the other hand, you have eaten a substantial breakfast, limit yourself to a light luncheon.

Also, consider the character of your work. If it requires muscular effort, try to include in your noon meal an easily-digested, strength-giving food, such as a bowl of pea soup, a piece of sweet chocolate or a beaten egg. Some of the unwholesome dishes are nutritious, but they have lost their value by being poorly cooked. The friedegg sandwich is an example of that. On the other hand, the trouble is that it offers little or no nourishment.

Another way to circumvent the shabby skirt of the all-day suit is suggested by a new fashion, the dress and coat that make a suit. Here the bottom of a modish chemise dress is made of the suit material while the top is of satin or tricolette to match exactly, or possibly to contrast. It may be as elaborately embreidered or otherwise trimmed as one desires above the hip line, but below it must keep severely plain so that when the coat is on no one would dream that anything but a separate skirt and blouse were beneath it. The best way to provide for this extra dress for wearing with the suit coat is

Married his Sweetheart's Double

- and Didn't Know It!

And the Dreadful Tangle That Followed Dolly Green's Confession That She and Mildred Gardner,

Her Double, Had Simply Traded Lives.

DID you ever have that yearning to be the "other fellow," to swap the life to which you were born, to lay off the habits and the associations and the environments so irksome, and become your neighbor just for a time? Especially when things were going perversely and you imagined that John Smith was much better off than you and had an easier lot and more money and a more when figure in this remarkable story actually satisfied. They swapped lives. They ceased to be themselves. One stepped from the home to the stage and the other from the stage to the home. Both thought they wanted to do so. Did they? Read this story and find out and in reading recall that famous expression of Josh Billings about the man who wanted to swap places with his neighbor. Josh told us that that man would want to swap back the next day. But these girls—well, read it and see for yourself what happened.

By Joseph H. Appelgate

ILDRED GARDNER, until the epoch in her life about which this story is concerned, was much like the average Dallas girl of 17, sweet, wholesome, full of Texas love of life and love and adventure; only, she "went around" more than most of the girls her age, herdly missing a night or a "high place" along the road of pleasure. She never forgot to say good-morning to the milkman going in at a time that some of her most industrious friends were dressing by artificial light to catch the early car-for business. And she seemed to thrive on it. Her mother reprimanded her, her father called her a "night owl," her brothers growled out that she ought to be going to work and contributing toward the upkeep of the family instead of spending daylight between the sheets of a nocturnally neglected bed.

All of which sank as far into the thoughts of miss Mildred as parafin wax in the babbling trout stream which her life, noisy and active, so closely resembled. At these periods, when the pace became a bit swift, she could always pause for breath on the old moss-covered boulder "One is only young once." And, as, after all, she was as harmless and as guileless as the stream to which her life current was comparable, her mother bumored her in her desire for the night life on Tallas, much to the expressed disgust of the men of the household.

Moreover, when she went the rounds of her pleasure, she was in good company, her mother felt, a young man named Lawrence Kelly to whom she was publicly engaged. But, instead of planning for the dove cote in the manner of those about to enter matrimony, Miss Mildred, if you please, permitted a yearning for the stage to become an obsession with her, a sweet obsession out of which she did not even try to climb. She encouraged this longing for the footlights with frequent glances at the mirror and private lessons on the latest dances in which the public finds enjoyable diversion at the theatre. She did not confide this desire to be an actress to her sweetheart. But she did tell a girl friend that she was waiting for the time when she would get the chance to go on the stage. "I feel that I am a born actress," she put it, as the expression has been used time out of mind.

The Perfect "Doubles" Meet

It was in this frame of mind that she went with young Mr. Kelly one night to see a second company of a New York extravaganza which had just struck Dallas. The show started well but there was nothing particularly startling in it on Miss Mildred's precociously broad horizon until the second act. Then, looking at one of the show girls, Miss Mildred had a start. At first she couldn't quite believe it. So she blinked and looked, then blinked and looked again. Then she became certain that what she was looking at was not her cwn reflection in the mirror but a perfect counterpart of herself in the face and form of the girl on the stage. It was as perfect a double as ever occurred outside natural twins.

"Well, I never," exclaimed Miss Mildred to her fiance. "There I am, three from the left in the first row. Look, Larry!"

Larry looked and agreed with her that the resemblance was striking. "But if she got her paint off it would be different," he added. "It's the make-up that produces the effect."

And he promptly forgot the matter and went on enjoying the show.

But Miss Mildred did not forget. In fact, when she got home she lay awake until broad daylight thinking about it. And, not being able to sleep, she got up, dressed and went down to the theatre, to find when she could talk to her double. She was told to return at 1 o'clock that afternoon. She was there, promptly. And it was not long before she was in the dressing room among a score of girls in various degrees of dishabille, chatting away with Dolly Green, her counterpart, as if they had been lifelong friends.

"The resemblance is perfect," she said, surveying the show girl, whose attire at that moment would not have been uncensored even on the most daring stage, "Why, you and I are even the same chare!"

The pretty little actress surveyed herself and laughed

"You've got the advantage of me," she said.
Three minutes later, she agreed.

"Why, say, girlie," declared the show girl, as she stood side by side with her visitor, before a full-length mirror. "If you had my clothes on now and were on the stage the manager wouldn't

And the other girls in the dressing room, who had watched curiously while the visitor placed herself on equal terms with them, agreed.

"If you two girls approached each other with the same clothes on you'd both turn back thinking you were walking into a mirror," spoke up one actress, as she pointed out the resemblance even to every curve on their bodies.

"It must be glorious to be an actress," said Miss Mildred, after she had replaced her clothing. "What would I not give to be in your place!"

The show girl smiled sadly.

"This life isn't what it's cracked up to be," she said. "You don't see the base stuff underneath. You only catch the glitter. If you were in it you would soon tire." She became thoughtful. Even through the heavy cosmetic the mood found expression. "I'd give anything to quit it all," she went on. "I'm sick of it. I just long for a quiet home. Why, girlie, you are lucky. And see! You've even got a steady!" She bent over and examined the platinum set stone in the engagement ring on the other's finger.

Both went into thought abstraction. They did not even hear the inane chatter about them. One saw a stage, brilliant, alluring; the other a home, quiet, comforting. Each longed for the other's lot. Then Miss Mildred spoke:

"Let's swap!"

"Swap! What do you mean?"
"Just what the words mean. You be me and I'll be you!"

"And then-"

"And then—"
"We'll both have what we want!"

The signal sounded for the girls to get ready to go before the footlights. It recalled the show girl to the things she hated. And as a flash of lightning she said:

"Brilliant. I'm game. But for how long?"
"Forever," replied Miss Mildred, with finality.

"Forever," replied Miss Mildred, with finality.
The show girl's face darkened.
"But what would you do about your flance?"

"He's thrown in," responded the other, and the gravity of the statement was reflected in the determined look on the speaker's face.

"Honest-to-goodness, cross your heart?"
"So help me," said the stage-struck Miss, raising her right hand above her head.

How They Did It

Thus was the bargain made and the girls the next day set about to carry it out. They told each other all their habits and their histories. They omitted nothing. Miss Mildred arranged so that Miss Dolly clandestinely peeped at all the members of her family. Miss Dolly had no family, so that part of the deception was easy. Miss Dolly taught Miss Mildred her part in the show and the night the change was made the manager did not suspect anything had happened. Neither did the Gardner family realize the presence of a new daughter. Even Lawrence Kelly suspected nothing. When Miss Dolly became Miss Mildred and his own sweetheart changed into the show girl he did not even suspect the hoax. In fact, when he exercised the privilege that engaged young men have he found that the lips he kissed were just as sweet as they ever were, if he thought comparatively at all about it. He was so utterly fooled and the substituted fiancee so well pleased with him that the plans for the wedding went right ahead and when the day fixed arrived they were wedded. The marriage certificate bore the name of "Mildred Gardner." And as "Mildred Gardner" Dolly Green was given away by Mr. Gardner; and as

Mrs. Kelly, which she was, she received the warm kisses of congratulations of a score of strange men, uncles, cousins, old-time flames, who thought they were kissing the former Miss Mildred. And the whole affair was none the less successful.

Then came the revelation. She and her husband had taken a train for Denver. But when they arrived there was a police detective awaiting the bridegroom with a warrant charging the passing of worthless checks. In his desire to give his bride a handsome present the young man, it was charged, had written his name to a piece of paper worth the paper and no more. So he was locked up in Boulder county jail.

Then the still, small voice of conscience spoke and Mrs. Kelly confided the inside of the remark-and Mrs. Kelly confided the inside of the remarkable "swap" to the jailed husband. Through the bars of his cell she told him all the details. At first he did not comprehend. Then, when the episode of the double on the stage was recalled, he understood.

"But it makes no difference, little girl," he said, reassuringly. "When I get out of here, just to humor you, I will marry you again under your own name. But I love you and now am glad that the swap was made for I might not have been so happy with the other."

And there the matter stands today. Only, the real Miss Mildred has joined the bogus Miss Mildred among the ranks of those outside the stage. It took just a month to cure the stage-struck girl of her craze for the footlights. But she was good to her bargain and kept her word. She did not break the news to her folks at home although they learned it later. And now, as a magazine writer in San Francisco, she is said to have found proper channel for the expression of that imaginative mind which conceived what was probably the most remarkable duplicity of its kind ever successfully carried out.

Will Insects Ever Rule the World?

ILL insects some day succeed in exterminating man and rule the world? As an answer to this question Maeterlinck, it seems, hit on a bare nerve when he said that insects were "the rivals of our last hours and perhaps our successors."

Man through a long course of evolution, according to scientists, became the apparently undisputed master-creature of the earth. Will he continue in this dominant position as long as the earth remains habitable? Or will human hegemony be succeeded by that of some other specialized member of the zo-ological life-group?

An indication of what serious consideration scientists are giving this question insect experts from all over the world recently met in London to discuss the subject of "Insect vs. Man."

The Belgian-French poet, thinker and observer, Maurice Maeterlinck, has done much to arouse thinking minds about this subject by what he has written about insects.

"The insect," says Maeterlinck, "does not belong to our world. Other animals, and even the plants, despite their mute lives and the great secrets they enfold, seem not to be such total strangers, for we still feel in them, notwithstanding all their peculiarities, a certain terrestrial

"They may surprise, or even amaze us at times, but they do not completely upset our thoughts. Something in the insects, however, seems to be alien to the habits, morals and psychology of our globe, as if it had come from some other planet, more monstrous, more energetic, more insensate, more atrocious, more infernal

"No doubt in this astonishment and failure to comprehend we are beset with an indefinable, profound and instinctive uneasiness, inspired by beings so incomparably better armed and endowed than ourselves, concentrations of energy and activity in which we divine our most mysterious foes, the rivals of our last hours, and perhaps our cessors."

Take the case of the cinch bug. In America in one year this insect destroyed wheat to the value of $73,000,000. Another pest is the Mexican boll weevil, which in 1918 caused a loss of over $200,000,000 worth of cotton.

There seems to be an attraction about cotton which draws to it more insect pests than any other crop. Egypt estimated a loss of $50,000,000 in 1917 through the ravages made on her cotton by the pink boll worm, and there are many other kinds of insect which prey upon cotton plants.

Tea plants suffer greatly from two insects

Tea plants suffer greatly from two insects known as the tea tortrix and the shot-hole borer. The latter is so-called because of the holes it bores in the plants.

England suffers almost as badly as any country. The sodlin moth ruins apples, and does damage estimated at $500,000 yearly. The Colorado beetle, which preys on potatoes, hails from America, as its name implies, and causes such havoc that the most stringent precautions have been taken to prevent it gaining a footing. For instance, it is a serious offence to keep one of these beetles in England.

Attempts at reforesting the world, to make up for the timber used in the war, have been greatly hampered by the pine weevil, which devours the young pines as soon as they appear.

A few years ago insects killed every chestnut tree in New Jersey.

Most insect pests may be destroyed by certain poisons, which, however, are so expensive that it is doubtful whether they could be used extensively.

Every insect has a natural insect-enemy, and one expert has suggested that a good idea would be to breed these insects, so that in time they may fight and destroy the pests.

The ant is famous for its indications of supposedly human-like intelligence. Unquestionably it has a kind of intelligence, but the supposition that it mimics human mentality is evidently an error. Not long ago a French investigator spent much time in an elaborate attempt to penetrate the secret of ant intelligence. He was a civil engineer as well as a naturalist, and he followed out their roads, their "explorations and voyages" and he found that these creatures, though their doings are efficient for their own purposes, have no unmistakable points of contact with even the simplest human forms of intelligence. This was to be expected, on account of their possession of sense organs utterly incomprehensible to man.

Uncompanional Confessions of

Betty Ash, Who Confesses That She Made a Bonds in Her Search for Love.

By BETTY ASH

OR 15 years I have led a life of misery and he was generous and entertaining. I thought I loved him humiliation. For all those I have uttered no complaint against Sidney Ash, my husband, and have said no word until he brought suit against me for divorce and I was forced to tell my story in the public courts. I have been condemned by the public although I am not more guilty than my husband of a disregard for the conventions of life. I won the case in court, am separated from my husband and have the right to demand alimony if I would, but I want none of his support in any way. All that I want is my children who are withheld from me and in this L cannot see the justice or humanity, for though I have sinned in one respect their father has sinned, too, in many ways.

When I was a child, not quite 16, I was married to Sidney Ash. I was practically fresh from convent life, My parents were not in this country. I was cared for during my childhood by my grandmother. Never had I been told of life, or marriage or love, I was nearly as ignorant on those subjects as though I had never even heard the words, and it is largely to this great and criminal failure of those who had charge of me to enlighten me in any way regarding life that I led the long 15 years of horror that I have passed through. That I was permitted to marry at such a tender age is in itself a crime, to my way of thinking.

I frankly admit that at 16 I was dazzeled by the prospect of marriage. To think of a home of my own, money to spend, clothes, jewelry, all such things, are fascinating to a young girl; but of the duties of a wife, of the give and take in matrimony, of children, I knew nothing. So I was when married to Sidney Ash.

I would not talk of this for a moment unless I had a hope that my story may awaken mothers to their responsibility toward their daughters and may also reach some young girls and prevent them from making a mistake which they may live to regret. If the mothers of this or any other country are incapable of instructing their daughters and preparing them for the future, then I frankly believe that this matter should be taken out of incompetent hands and become the duty of the state. What does the average girl of 16 know of life, or love or home making? Nothing-practically nothing!

That was exactly my case. How I wish they had kept me from that marriage! How I have wished that deeply and from the bottom of my heart for years and years. I met Mr. Ash, as I say, when I was but a girl. with an undying love. This was only natural, for how many times does a girl fall in what she thinks is love when she is young, when all men who are kindly and chivalrous seem to her romantic young mind like knights in shining armor? I was in the first spring of romance. The book of romance had been opened to me and as other girls as ignorant as I, I thought I must read it through. But what bitter chapters I have encountered and the book not yet ready to close.

When I was a girl I was rather quiet and inclined to be studious. I thought that Mr. Ash was the same, although when we met first we did go out a good deal. Yet he seemed to sympathize with the deeper things that interested me. Soon after our marriage I discovered my mistake. If I wanted to stay home quietly of an evening I was called a "quitter" and all sorts of things and was eventually left alone. He did not consider his wife and his children, when they came, as much more than conveniences, and he even considered the children a nuisance, for many times they would keep me from going out with him. Not that he particularly enjoyed my company, I think, but because he wanted to display me and my clothes to his friends.

BITTERLY OPPOSES EARLY MARRIAGE

You see, when I married I had not seen much of men and my scope for choice was limited. The man who seemed all a hero to me then, I soon discovered to be made of very common clay. I would implore mothers to keep their daughters from such early marriages. Surely, it is important. A young man is not considered fit to vote until he is 21. That is the law, and surely if he is not considered right to vote until that age, a girl should not be considered right to marry until at least that, Voting is a matter of a few minutes, marriage is a matter of years. Surely there should be more pains taken in preventing marriages at tender years.

When my first child was born a great and wonderful thing came into my life. True, I had become somewhat disillusioned by this time, but I felt, as do many women, that the advent of the child might make for better conditions in the home and better relations between my husband and myself. But, not so! Instead of getting better things grew worse. I yearned and yearned for just a little understanding and real affection,

There was no one in whom I could confide my troubles. No one of whom I could ask advice. When I was first subjected to indignities I nearly died of shame. by my husband of being He was somewhat older than I. He spent money freely, Then I heard some other women talking who seemed

Here Is the Astonishing Personal Story of a Young Wife Who Fled from Husband and Children, Defying Conventions, Returning to Fight for Her Children and Now Admits Her Disastrous Mistake

BETTY ASH tells her story on this page, a human document, compelling in its frankness, and presenting a heart-felt warning. It is a remarkable story because it contains answer to that which the world is every day asking, "Why did she do it?"

It is more than a confession of womanly weakness. It is a sermon of virile strength, a warning to womankind everywhere that it is better to abide by "worse" than to seek solace in the love flame that turns to cold ashes.

Because of the surrounding circumstances, the complexion of the home life she had, the sermonizing of Betty Ash is the more extraordinary and potent. She had certain excuses for leaving her husband, if her story is true. And the jury believed this story when, in the husband's action for divorce, it returned a verdict in her favor. The woman became her own judge. Carefully weighing the facts on both sides she renders the verdict-Guilty. She says: "I beg from the bottom of my heart and from out of the bitterness of my experience that any woman who may today be contemplating a rash move, no matter what her home conditions may be, will think long and seriously before she takes the step."

Bernard Krueger the man-entered her life in the role of a real hero. Mrs. Ash and her younger son, Victor, were being borne away to death by a strong undertow following the capsizing of her husband's yacht in the Great South Bay off the Long Island coast. Knueger, a total stranger, witnessing the happening from a distance, lost no time in arriving on the scene and rescued her and her child.

Her husband seemed to be very grateful. He induced Krueger to come and live with them. Then he took him into his business as a partner. Friendship that seemed bound by hoops of steel formed between the two men.

Eventually the woman gave the hero the reward of her friendship.

But it was not without a terrible struggle, one of those fearful contests that have their drama in the soul. She continued the struggle when she was 3,000 miles away from her husband, in Los Angeles, and under one roof with Krueger-until the time of her surrender.

Then she wanted to let the whole world know.

less ashamed of such a thing. From their con-

"I am pioneering in a new field," she announced. "It takes courage to run counter to conventions, but there is no such thing as love without congeniality of taste and comradeship of spirit."

Four months of that life and, November 10, 1920, she said: "I am sick of the life and realize that I have made a mistake."

It was the yearning for her children, Emanuel, 15, Victor, 7; that brought about the revolution of her feelings. She wanted to get back to them even though they were children of the man she said she did not love. For she had discovered that mother love is the strongest thing in the world, myself to admit such things even to my most intimate women friends, I endured them. In public Mr. Ash was wonderful to me. He told everyone what a wonderful woman I was, so that our friends and acquaintances were led to believe that our life was smooth and happy. They did not see behind the scenes They did not know that if I did anything in public that did not just meet with his approval, did not play up to one or two special persons in whom he was interested, that when I reached home far dif- ' ferent scenes occurred. They did not see the fearful rages that followed, nor did they see a room after one of these violent fits of temper.

I was always well dressed because my husband wanted me so. I had lovely jewelry because he wanted his friends and acquaintances to see how well he treated his wife. But they did not hear the honeyed utterances made in public turn to curses when we were alone. Nor did they see the hand that caressed me in public insult me at home.

All this time I thought these were things that had to be endured by a wife. Had I really known all I do now I would have divorced him long ago and had my two dear children with me. But I did not know, Then, suddenly, I found myself in love with Bernard Krueger.

It was in the summer of 1916 that I met him, We were down on Great South Bay, sailing in my husband's yacht. It suddenly capsized. Mr. Krueger was on the scene and heroically rescued my boy and myself. A friendship sprang up between us all and we saw a good deal of Mr. Krueger. Finally my husband lost a large sum of money and we found ourselves in straightened circumstances. It was then that I first went into the movies. was forced to do this but I was accused at the trial stage-struck. As a matter

MENTAL HUNGER WORRIES SOUL

It was at this time that it was suggested that I borsome money from Mr. Krueger. I did not want to this. But I yielded at last and borrowed the money. was then that Mr. Krueger showed me much sympathy d our understanding of each other became greater. Of course, all this time our acquaintance had kept up I found in Mr. Krueger a congenial spirit. He is a n of quiet manner who reads and appreciates the finer ngs of life. We were together a good deal without any ection on my husband's part. We went out for rides walks now and then, but our relations were those of ndship only. Unless a woman has been placed in the sition that I was with a husband with whom I had

Mr. Ash financially was spasn boarding in the country and their grandmother car- modically up and down. But physical hunger I know is for them someone had to earn money enough to keep not as bad and cannot compare with mental hunger and hunger for a congenial soul. Mr. Krueger satisfied this

It was at Mr. Ash's invitation that Mr. Krueger finally came to live at our home. When we were again established in New Rochelle, he went into business with Mr. Ash and through constant association with him, having the influence of his kindness around me all the time, I fell deeper and deeper in love with him.

HUSBAND INDIFFERENT TO ACTS

I know in my heart and soul that my husband did not care what happened to me. Mr. Krueger kept up his share in the household expenses. I do not think that I realized how far I was going, how I was drifting; but I do know that Mr. Ash was fully aware of my friendship with Mr. Krueger and not only tolerated it but seemed to have anything in common intellectually she may to encouraged it. Mr. Krueger had not ceased to be a hero in my eyes. I would say that his heroic deed of sav- men. I knew that I was not guiltier than he. My husband my soul.

drowning was but one of his heroic actions. Daily, from the time he came to live in our house, he was rendering me such little services as only a true man can render a woman whom he sees unhap-

the business relations between the two men became acute. They had a great row, blows were exchanged, and finally Mr. Krueger left the house. With his departure things became worse and worse between my husband and myself -worse than I could ever imagine to be possible-and, at last, being able to stand it no longer, I decided to go West, earn money and send for my children. I left in a desperate state. Everything was in confusion. Probably, had I had some one to counsel me then, I would not have gone without my children. But I was nearly crazy. Sixteen years of such an experience as mine had done their work with me.

A great clamor was made about my going to Los Angeles. It was called an elopement. It was not. For a number of years I had been a victim of loss of memory. At one time I found myself in a hospital, not knowing how I got there. When Mr. Krueger heard that I was going West he was afraid that under such a strain I might have one of these attacks and come to some harm. So he decided (it was just one more of his kindly deeds), to go on the same train and see that I got there all right and was safely established in Los Angeles. I paid my own fare. He paid his. It was not an elopement and we did not live together in California. Furthermore, we did not quarrel there as it has been reported and he did not leave me in a quarrel. He came back to institute a suit against Mr. Ash on the charge of assault.

It was while we were in California that Mr. Ash telegraphed instructions for our arrest for an alleged violation of the Mann act, but we were quickly released, and when those in authority heard my story everyone was more than kind to me.

It was while still in California that Mr. Ash had me served with divorce papers, thinking that I could not get back East in time and that the case would go by default I hurried back to fight my case and won it; for I knew that if he obtained this divorce that he would have my children forever. Also he had told me he wanted to divorce me that he might marry someone else.

I fought that divorce with all my power. I told things to the judge and jury that I never thought possible to utter. I was humiliated and tortured on the stand. I longed for a woman judge and jury, and right here I will ing myself and my son from lost his case, but was awarded the custody of the children. Had I known or thought for one moment that my going to California would mean that I could not have my children I never would have gone. But I did not realize this and I could not believe that the law would take my children from me, I could not believe that I would be so heavily condemned.

When I was served with the divorce papers in Cali-Finally a time came when fornia I could not believe that it was true, for I did not see how he could bring a suit for divorce against me because I believed that he all the time knew of my friendship with Mr. Krueger, and not only knew of it, but seemed to sanction it in his own home. It was a complete surprise to me,

I know now that the mother-love transcends any other kind of love ever born. I know that I would go through anything in this world to get my boys. I know that nothing can ever make up for my separation from them, and any woman contemplating such a step as I took, I beg and implore her to think well before she takes it, for the day on which she wakes to the fact that her children can no longer be with her will be the bitterest

WARNING TO YOUNG GIRLS

I do no know what good the telling of my story will do for young girls contemplating early marriages. All early marriages do not turn out as mine did. But there is this, love at first sight is a very rare thing, and the girl who thinks she is in love for life at the age of 16 usually soon finds out her mistake. It is easy to get married, but it is a great tragedy to have to live through an unhappy marriage and when it comes to obtaining a divorce only those who have had to go through the harrowing experience of the divorce courts can tell you anything of the agony entailed.

I spent all these years of my life trying to make a happy home, trying to bring up my children in the right way and to give them the understanding that I did not have in my youth, I struggled to face the world bravely in spite of the horror of my home life. I let people believe, as hundreds of women are doing today, that my husband was all that he seemed to be in public, I struggled against my love for another man, and it was only when urged to a state that only a woman in my position could understand that I at last accepted that love and companionship.

But nothing, nothing in the world is worth the loss of one's children, and I beg from the bottom of my heart and out of bitterness of my experience that any woman who may be today contemplating a rash act, no matter what her home conditions may be, will think long and seriously before she takes that step. Place your children in the same scales with your love and see which one will weigh the most. If for a moment the scales seem to tip in favor of that love, look carefully again, and decide before you take the step that you may always regret, decide fully which is the dearest to your heart. I for my part, say say that I think it is uncivilized to try such a case before again, give me back my children, for in them is my life and

ONCE IN A NORTHERN TWILIGHT By MARY SYNON

How One Shot Out of the Dusk Brought the Hope of Happiness to Two Men and Two Women.

DITH KENDRICK was watching the trail of foam in the wake of a motor boat far out on Porcupine Lake when Letty Williams came up the cordurey road from Golden City. We had been talking of the sea, Mrs. Kendrick and Constable and I, while we had waited for the coming of the other guests whom Kendrick was asking to the dinner in celebration of Ted Leffen's gold strike at the Missinaibi. Hundreds of miles from the Atlantic, up there in the North Country under the eaves of James Bay, shut in by the Wilderness of the Bush, we were drifting into the old nostalgia for salt water that only those who have dwelt beside the ocean know after they have lived in exile.

It was an ancient chapter with argonauts like ourselves, but always Edith Kendrick seemed to live it with a strange and wistful intensity queerly at variance with her indifferent acceptance of the life in which Kendrick held her. It dowered her somehow with a quality so apart from her husband that there were those of us in the Porcupine camp who shut our eyes to Kendrick's shady transactions in order that we might hold his wife in our midst.

On that evening, with the air ominously heavy with threat of coming storm, her homesickness for a place and a time gone by overcast our pretense at gavety until we looked at each other with something like relief as we saw the girl on the road. "She's going to marry Ted Leffen," Mrs. Kendrick explained swiftly, to our surprise at discovering her guest to be Letty. "Bert wanted her asked."

Constable flung a cryptic look at me as Edith Kendrick went to the door of the veranda to welcome the newcomer. We had always guessed that Kendrick staged his dinners for a purpose beyond social amenities, and we had suspected that he was entertaining for hot headed, hard drinking, wild young Ted Leffen so that he might worm his way into making money out of the boy's lucky find in the new camp; but we had never before had Edith's statement of her own passivity in the game. At that, however, she needed hardly to have said anything. That Letty Williams was coming up the tiny path to the house by the lake was proof enough that the affair was of Kendrick's stage management, for Letty Williams was of those whom Kendrick would know and whom Edith

There wasn't anything definitely against the girl, to be sure. She had come, a latter day voyageur, into the Porcupine as correspondent for a Montreal newspaper, and remained as assistant to Cary Connors in the getting out of the miniature weekly which chronicled the good luck and bad, the hopes life to the full in a mining camp. She had chosen from the first to east her lot with men rather than with women, and she had paid the price of her choosing in a social ostracism which became marked as the social system of Golden City developed. She had taken her sentence lightly, to all appearances, but her very gratitude, showing its face to Edith Kendrick now, showed that the iron must have entered her soul.

"Isn't this a pretty place?" she exclaimed admiringly as she came within the veranda's shelter, paying tribute unconsciously to the woman who had wrought the miracle of ordered beauty out of the wilderness. "And

"We weren't admiring it properly, I'm afraid," Edith Kendrick said, slipping Letty into the conversation with that deftness of social skill which always made me wonder what she had been before she had married to marry him at all. "We were dreaming of how the sea must look in a sunset like this."

"I don't know," Letty Williams said. "I never saw it. Ted talks of it often, though. He comes from Halifax, you know."

"From Halifax? That's my town, but I didn't know him there."

"You wouldn't have." Letty gave me a smile which revealed amusement in the circumstance. "Ted didn't have much claim to fame in his boyhood. He must have had a pretty hard time, although you'd never find that out from him. Captain Stratton, though, his partner, sometimes says that-

"Is that Ross Stratton?" Mrs. Kendrick's voice, modulated though it was, drew taut. "Yes. He came from Halifax, too, didn't

"I believe so. Has he been here?"

"O, no. I met him in Haileybury. He's coming in tonight, though. That's why Ted didn't come with me. He's waiting to see if I == Edith's hand close tightly upon the arm of her wicker chair. A little tremor, as if of pain, twitched her mouth, but her voice held steady as she asked, " Is his wife coming with him?"

Letty Williams' eyes widened a little. "I really don't know," she said.

There fell a silence that Constable hastened to break. "I knew a Stratton in Goldfields before the war," he said. "Fine chap. No alloy in him.'

"That would be Captain Stratton," Letty

A smile, half scornful, half speculative, afted Edith's lips. "I wonder," she mused.

Kendrick was bending over Ted Leffen. Edith stood across from them, her lips tight, her lips stormily contemptuous.

Then, as if she drew down a curtain in front of her emotion, she shut out personalities by a sudden shifting of the conversation; but the gaze of her eyes as they turned back toward the lake, all golden now in the light of the flare beyond the rim of the pines, deepened into brooding sadness which did not lift with Kendrick's coming.

A tall man, of a litheness which always reminded me of a panther, he came out of the house with a soft step which suggested stealth. His smile, affable enough and showing his remarkably even white teeth, never extended to his eyes, which seemed to watch the world as if it were a jackpot. His glance went over Constable and myself, appraising us rightly as stage settings, and rested questioningly upon Letty Williams. Beneath it she flushed hotly for a moment, then controlled herself into a glaze of good manners which strove to ignore her host. "Where's Ted?" he demanded of her at last.

"He'll be up in a little while," she said. and did not mention Stratton. Edith Kendrick shot at her a look which questioned the cause of the omission, but the girl seemed not to notice it, talking to me with a flurry of words I might have found annoying had I not glimpsed the worry in her eyes as she watched the road and known that she was ordinary anxiety of a social responsibility. Her relief as he came in sight was so evident

"To be in love in the North Country in the springtime!" he said with a laugh that was almost a sigh. "What wouldn't we old timers give to win back that guerdon?"

"I wouldn't want it," Edith Kendrick said "Not flattering to me, is it?" Kendrick laughed nastily. The straight look she gave him shouted that she had not been thinking of him. He met it with careless contempt that had in it the consciousness of power. They faced each other with unveiled hostility as they arose to greet Ted Leffen. Then, just as quickly, with the resilience of long training, they snapped back into their ordinary attitude of conjugal contentment as the boy turned in from the

He brought in his coming something of and I gave him greeting hardly less enthusiastic than was Letty's. Our pleasure in his sudden good fortune reflected, I think, that of the district, for Ted Leffen had never been any man's enemy but his own. Gav. blithe. and hopeful, he had come to the North Country as a free lance prospector. His courage and likability had inspired Stratton, who had been for years a prophet of the Porcupine, to stake the boy. For months he had been hunting along the Missinaibi, coming into Golden City only for supplies.

On one of these trips he had met Kendrick, who was always on watch to win the friendship of young prospectors, setting his spider traps for their entrance. From that time the hard drinking which men came to connect with Leffen's name went on whenever the boy appeared. Whether or not he had met Letty Williams before he had started to drink we did not know. Nor did we know whether or not his marriage to her, presaged so casually by Edith Kendrick, would change drick held him close and that, for some reason, he was using Letty Williams to strengthen that hold. His manner toward the girl revealed his intention, but she affected to ignore it in absorbed attention in Leffen. That the boy really loved her was unmistakable as he watched her. Pride in her shone in his eyes so honestly that I grew ashamed of my judgments on her. What if she were a weatherbeaten little bird of passage? She was going to give Leffen some thing that Edith Kendrick had surely never given to her husband. She was getting a devotion that swept aside everything but its own faith. No wonder that Constable beamed on them both and that Mrs. Kendrick stared at the boy and girl as if they were ghosts of a day she had long sought to forget. In the glow of such happiness only Kendrick's watchfulness seemed baneful; and even that flickered down as we followed his wife to the screened porch which they made the summer dining room.

There, at the foot of the table, spread brightly with the silver which they had packed through miles of muskeg, and gay with the early flowers of that garden for which Edith slaved so valiantly, she slipped into the rôle which she played so often in that setting. Not the homesick woman who had given confidence to Constable and myself, not the unhappy wife flinging defiance at her husband, but the hostess who, with the ease of long practice, keeps alive the spirit of the occasion for which her guests have been summoned.

Spirited, brilliant, charming, she took the bit of responsibility in her teeth and galloped down the road of conversation. She brought out Letty Williams until the girl's eyes shone with delight in realization of her own powers, and Leffen beamed upon them both. She led Leffen on until the boy expanded in rollicking humor. Even Kendrick's keen eyes glistened as the party slid on smoothly. Only once did he show annoyance, and that was when Ted Leffen pushed aside the champagne which the China boy had poured.

"Here's to you." he cried, springing to his feet, "your health and happiness! Good

He lifted his glass high, and Constable and I raised ours. Letty Williams looked at Leffen in troubled question. The boy bit his lip, hesitated, then downed the liquor. Edith Kendrick and Letty toyed with their glasses. The China boy came back and poured more for Kendrick and Ted. I thought I saw Letty signal to him to let it alone. If he saw her, he did not heed her. Steadily, and as swiftly as the servant followed Kendrick's instructions, Ted Leffen began to drink. Little by little, led on perhaps as much by Kendrick's sharp questioning as by the wine, he began to boast. We had known that the strike at the Missinaibi promised riches, but we had not dreamed of the extent of the gold in the lode until the boy garrulously proclaimed the wealth of his El Dorado.

"It's richer than the Big Dome," he insisted, "richer than the Hollingworth, richer than any of them. Ken, richer, maybe, than all of them put together." Kendrick's eyes gleamed through the recountal. "But only half of it's mine. The other half's Stratton's. That's what I came in for this week. Going to meet him and turn over his share to him." "Haven't you done it yet?" Kendrick "Plenty of time," Leffen maundered. Plenty of money for us both. Lots for me and Letty. Isn't there, Letty?"

"Oh, Ted, stop talking about it," the girl said sharply. "We're all glad you have it, and you're glad, of course, but let it go at

"Going to call it the Letty." he persisted. "Let's drink to the Letty."

"Let's not," pleaded the girl.

"It's once in a lifetime," said Kendrick. Letty's eyes blazed at him from the shadows that were falling over the side of the porch where she sat, but Edith gave no. sign of desire to halt him. Constable, schooled as he was to all sorts of scenes, was revealing a faint edge of annoyance. and I was not surprised when he arose with us, leaving the man and the boy alone.

"I'm not smoking tonight," he said, and followed us to the other veranda.

Once out of Kendrick's sight, Edith's spirits sagged visibly. She no longer made effort to roll the ball, and seemed, whenever she spoke, to be rousing herself from apathetic listlessness. Sometimes I had the feeling that she was watching for some one, just as I knew that Letty Williams was listening for sounds from the dining porch. All we could hear was the drone of conversation. Long minutes dragged, and still Kendrick and Leffen did not come. Constable grew plainly werried, while Edith affected to ignore the situation. Finally, driven by Letty's nervous agitation, she left us, going

"I wish he hadn't made Ted drink tonight," Letty said worriedly when Edith had gone. "Captain Stratton will be in before midnight, and Ted should meet him. Ted can't stand it, and Bert Kendrick ought to know better.'

"Should he?" Constable asked with sneer-

"Oh, well," she said enigmatically, "I suppose he can't do anything here."

Her tension tightened as Edith did not return. "Do you suppose Ted needs me?" she asked, held only by her sense of lack of acquaintanceship with the Kendricks, but so pitiful in her perturbation over the boy that I arose

"I'll see." I said, and went after Edith.

I went through the living room toward the other porch, intending to call the trio there with assumed levity; but at the scene which faced me I halted. Kendrick was bending over Ted Leffen, directing his hand over a paper, literally steering his signature on the document. Edith stood back of a chair across from them, her arms folded, her lips tight, her eyes stormily contemptuous. Not even when Kendrick passed her the paper and she slipped it down into her dress did she abate a jot of her scorn. She stayed, the table, while Kendrick passed her and went out upon the other veranda. After a little Leffen lifted his heavy head and saw

"It's all right," he told her with maudlin emphasis. "Bert's looking after it so Letty and I get half, and Ross gets half. Promised him half, and got to keep a promise, even if he don't need what I'll need. Ross hasn't wife, and I'll have Letty, but-"

"What did you say?" Edith Kendrick's voice cut across the silence with the sharpness of a stinging whip.

'I'll have Letty, but-

"Are you sure, quite sure," she bent over the table till she had caught his attention, "that Ross Stratton has not married?"

"Why, of course he hasn't. Loved a girl in Halifax long time ago. Said she'd wait for him till he'd won a stake. Married another man. They all do-all but Letty.

"But he told me that--" She ceased to speak when she saw that Leffen's head had sunk back on the table, but she stood, staring at him as if he held answer to some puzzling conundrum of life. As if she had found what she sought, she turned her gaze outward from him. Then, slowly, as if it were a rite, she took from within her gown the folded document which Kendrick had given to her and lighted it at the flame of one of the candles, holding it over a silver plate until it had gone to ashes. Without another look at Leffen, she went back to her guests. "I think," she said to Letty, "that it would be just as well if Ted stayed awhile."

"I wouldn't mind," the girl said, trying to be brave under the lashes of humiliation, "if it weren't that he's to meet Captain Stratton tonight. It's important, too, something about registry of the mine claim in both their

"Here's Stratton now," Constable said, and Edith Kendrick's hand went to her throat as she followed Constable's look and saw a big man coming through the dusk.

"He's not coming-here?" she gasped. "Why not?" Kendrick asked evenly, though his eyes burned in points of light. "I used to know him out in the Rand. Haven't seen him in years.

He struck a match futilely and flung it away with a curse. His face lowered in command as he watched his wife, but, without looking at him, she circled the chairs so that she was standing by the door when Stratton came to it. For a moment they looked at each other, two souls so evidently destined for meeting that all the circumstance of their contact fell away until Ken-

"Won't you come in?" he asked, contriving to put a sneer into the invitation.

"I'm looking for Leffen," the big man said, opening the door. "I was told he was here." He had found Constable, greeting him with cordiality tempered with surprise, and given Letty Williams a deference which seemed to assuage the girl's wounds. He did not look again at Edith, although she kept standing "He's here," Kendrick said, moving toward the dining porch and nodding to Stratton to follow him.

For the instant while he hesitated Edith stood rigid. Then, impelled by swift decision, she held out her hand to Stratton.

"If you had come an hour ago," she said, "I should have asked you why you didn't bring your wife. I have just learned that you had not married."

"Who said I had?" He flung back his head. "You did, didn't you, Bert?". She turned to Kendrick, who waited, impatient, at the door to the other veranda.

"When?" Stratton snapped out the

"Two weeks before we were married, wasn't it?"

"But you knew--- " Stratton flashed at Kendrick.

"I'd heard it somewhere," Kendrick countered.

"Oh, no," Edith said, facing them both. 'It wasn't that you'd merely heard it, Bert. You said you were at the wedding in Cape Town. You told me the girl's name, Veronica Mather. I haven't forgotten it, you see. She had golden hair, hadn't she? And a mint of money? And wasn't there ever a Veronica Mather?" She tried to keep her voice light in raillery, but beneath Stratton's

"There was a girl named Mather out there." he said, "but I didn't know her. I wasn't married then or afterward. How did you happen to make that mistake, Ken-

"I really don't know," Kendrick said indifferently. "Want to see Leffen?' He opened the door for Stratton, and the other man, without a glance at him, went through. We could hear the murmur of voices from the other porch. They rose into angry altercation, Ted Leffen's among them. I heard Kendrick's disagreeably taunting laugh, and his words: "You're just a little too late, Stratton, after all. Leffen signed over the mine to me."

"It's a lie." I heard Stratton declare, with Ted Leffen's groan rushing after his words. "I signed something, Ross. He told me it was nothing but a memorandum of what I'd owed him for drinks. He's been getting it in for me. I signed it. O, God!"

Even as he spoke Letty Williams was on her feet. "He didn't." she moaned to me. "He couldn't have!" To the blanched agony of her face I longed to be able to give denial of the truth, but the memory of the scene I had witnessed swept over me. "I'm afraid he did," I had to tell her. She sprang forward, flinging open the door of the other porch. "You didn't make him do that?" she cried to Kendrick. "Why, it's terrible. It's theft. It's cheating. You made him drunk just for that. How dare you? You'll have to give it back to him, I tell you. You must give it back!" "You're not threatening me, are you?" Kendrick sneered. "Your memory must be very, very poor if you think you dare do that. Letty, my dear. Perhaps you've forgot-

"I've forgotten nothing," the girl said. But I don't care about anything in the world but Ted. You shan't ruin him, I tell you. Before I let you do that, I'll--" "If you care so much for him," Kendrick said, "are you sure that you want him to know-what I do?"

The implication of the man's threat sent her back against the wall, but she turned it up?" she pleaded. "Can't we prove that he got it by fraud?"

"We'll see," Stratton said. She moved to where Leffen sat limply, at the table. "Ted, dear," she said, "are you quite sure you signed any paper?" Sobered by the shock of the realization, he nodded miserably. "I've thrown it all away," he said desolately.

"No, you haven't," she told him, "We're going to fight for it. And it doesn't matter to you and to me whether we ever get it or not. But we're going to get it for Ross

"We're going to get it back for you and me and Ross. Come with us now." But he broke away from her hand, and flung off the porch. Constable, driven at last into action in the drama, which had unfolded so swiftly before us, took a part of his own. "Let me take you home," he said to Letty Williams.

She had to pass Kendrick to come to him. "Don't forget," Kendrick told her, apparently oblivious that his wife and Stratton stood within hearing, "that, if you decide to fight me. I may have weapons-and use

She made no answer, but went off with Constable down the path that Ted Leffen had taken but a moment before. The three of them. Kendrick and Edith and Stratton, stood there in the deepening twilight so silent and so tense that there came over me the certainty that the play which I had thought ended by Letty Williams' going had not yet begun in earnest. I had the knowledge that I was an intruder, and I went back indoors for a parasol I had brought with me, thinking to slip off by the other door. I could not, however, get away from the sound of voices, and so it was that I heard Kendrick's.

"You won't mind, either of you, if I leave you for awhile? You'll find plenty to talk about, I am sure. There's me, for one, and Veronica Mather, for another. Queer I thought you'd married her, Stratton."

"Very queer."

"Well, good-by for a little while. Don't miss me too much."

The slam of a door followed. In the silence I could hear the lapping of the waves on the shore of the lake. A loon laughed somewhere near, and a bat flew by with flapping of wings. Then Edith spoke. "There's no use," she said, "in crying over spilt milk. But-what did he tell you, Ross, that made you stop writing to me?"

"He said that you were going to marry

"And he came back and told me you had married. We were fools, both of us, and I've earned a fool's reward.".

"Isn't he good to you?"

"Good?" Her laugh concentrated her bitterness. "You've seen what's happened this evening. Well, this is only one of them, For years he's been playing this game, I've been one of its pawns. I never cared what happened to him, or me, or any one else, until that boy told me tonight that you had never married. Then something I had thought dead came to life again in me-and

"We're pretty well into the woods of it now," she said bitterly. Suddenly she flung off restraint. "I can't stand it, Ross," she cried. "I've endured it all these years because I thought you'd failed me and that all men were alike. But I can't go on!" You'll have to, for awhile," he told her.

"Don't you see what he'll say if you quit

"I don't care what he says." "You would, some time."

"But you don't know what it is."

"I can guess," he said. As if he dared not linger on the quicksands of her emotion. he veered their talk swiftly.

"Have you known Ted Leffen long?" he asked her. "Long enough to know that he's so loyal and true that his friends try to save him from his one weakness?'

Skillfully he sought to lead away Edith's thoughts from herself while I wondered how I could get away without revealing my unintended eavesdropping, and finally decided upon a bolt through the kitchen and out into the bush back of the clearing. I passed the impassive China boy, who did not even look up from his labors at me, and had gone perhaps two hundred feet through the woods. intending to circle back to the boardwalk a little farther beyond, when I heard the sound of crackling brush and of hurried breathing. I crouched back against a tree, fearful of what might be prowling in the deepening twilight, and I saw Leffen go by, plunging toward the lake. In his hand he held a re-

I wanted to cry out, but fear paralyzed my himself? Or was he seeking for Kendrick? If he had gone to Golden City to get the gun, why had he come back if he were not bent on revenge? Vainly I struggled to call to him, to tell him that Edith Kendrick had wreaked his vengeance by burning the paper which Kendrick had tricked him into signing, but the cry stuck in my throat, and I clung

HALF CENTURY VIGIL FOR LOST LOVER

BY WILLIAM I. ENGLE.

Since the first year of the civil war Fanny Read has been waiting for Lieutenant John Bellows to come back from battle, up the winding road that leads out from the Flats to their old trysting place, a great gray foreboding building that was once a famous tavern and now is a deserted, ghostly shell, with one room occupied by an aged woman and forty-nine rooms gone to dust and cobwebs and memories of a far-off splendid past.

For the fourth time in these fifty nine years, Fanny Read lately left that grim prison, chosen by herself, to attend a funeral. And after the funeral she had dinner with a neighbor, the first time since 1861 that she had shown her face save in front of a coffin.

Now she has gone back-this time, she says, forever.

Fifty-nine years ago last fall a blue-eyed, laughing hoyden, Fanny Read, who was the belie of all that countryside between Windsor and Hancock, along the Erie on the line from Binghamton to Buffalo, was separated from her soldier-lover. Lieutenanta John Bellows, of the One Hundred and First regiment. New York infantry. That is the secret of the life spent in the seclusion of a tavern that closed its doors more than a half century ago. And around it revolves as strange a romance as ever was written in fic-

Fanny Read comes of a Scotch family, who came to America with the great fleet of 1630. Her grandfather, Stephen Read, built the first log cabin at Hancock in 1797.

From the times of the earlies settlement of Hancock the Read family dominated the countryside. The erected not only the huge old tavern in Hancock, but dozens of other houses, and at the time of the civil war it was at the height of its pow er and glory.

It was in this beydey of prosper ity that Fanny Read, the 18-year-old daughter of Riley Read, the proprietor of the then famous tavern, the American House, was known through all that section around Hancock as the cleverest, prettiest girl in Han-it well in Hancock.

"Will some one save it?" A half dozen men went into the parlor and carried it out. Then, as the fire abated, being checked by edge of his hotel, she went back into the building. And that is time, save at a funeral, that she has been seen in public since the One Hundred and First infantry tramp to the tree, panic-stricken, as Leffen pushed on through the tangle of undergrowth. Just as I had driven my will to follow him and taken a faltering footstep I heard another sound to the left, and turned my head to see Leffen must have seen him at the same time, for he turned swiftly and faced the other man. Dark as it was, I could not see his face, but some quality of surprise in his attitude showed that, if he had been seeking Kendrick, he had found him unexpectedly. after all. Not menacingly, even though he still held the gun in his hand, but directly he came toward him, moving straight across the angle of vision which I held as if I had been chained there. Kendrick waited, motionless, until Leffen had come close to him Then he spoke quietly.

"It would be a trick you'd do," he said. "to come at me with that when you know

How do I know that?" Leffen demanded His voice was weary, not angry, and my first suspicion that he intended self-destruction rushed back over me in such force that I almost welcomed the men's meeting. "If you don't go armed, you should, when you think of the men who must want to kill

"Wi at are you going to do?" There was no trumor in Kendrick's voice

"I'm going to end the job." The boy's tone touched the nadir of despair, and Kendrick caught its import. "I wouldn't do that," he said, with his old lightness in the face of a supreme decision in another life. "There are plenty of mines left at the Mis-

If he were baiting the boy to rouse himfrom his despair he won his purpose. I have thought since then that Kendrick would have had reason in plenty to dread the sentiment which Leffen's suicide might arouse against him as its direct cause. He must have known that he could not hope to hold the mine, even though he believed the claim to it safe with Edith, in the face of an aroused camp. With Leffen living, he might hope to weather the storm of protest. With Leffen dead, he was condemned before he was tried. With sure skill, therefore, he may have struck the one chord which could have brought Ted Leffen out of his one thought. For the boy, flinging aside the revolver, sprang forward at the older man.

"You'll take that back." he cried hoarsely

Come on, and we'll fight, man to man!" The rush of his onslaught caught Ken drick, and he swayed backward, crashing through the brush; but he caught himself with a clutch at Leffen, and managed some how to release the boy's grip upon him Then he sprang forward, his hand taloned as if to clutch at Leffen's throat as something suddenly freed me from silence and I gave a cry of terror which I heard resounding through the brush. Leffen turned at the sound and Kendrick took advantage of it to eatch him by the shoulders; but the younger man fought himself out of his grasp, and

For a moment I thought that Leffen had triumphed as I saw Kendrick bend far backward, but I knew it for a trick as he swung to one side and evaded the attack. The boy's breathing came heavily and I knew at what a disadvantage his drinking had put him He was younger, of course, and stronger than Kendrick, but he lacked the older man's litheness and swiftness. His overwhelming seemed so certain that I shouted to Kendrick to cease, but, if he heard my cry, he

With the certainty, the inevitability of a machine, he pressed on his antagoniat. He did not intend to kill him, I am sure, but he seemed about to crush him with ruthless cruelty. His long hands flickered toward Leffen's throat, and in the dusk he looked more like a blood-mad wildcat than like a

From somewhere-it seemed a long dis tance away-I could hear voices and the sound of people moving. I shouted again in the hope of bringing them near. Kendrick had Leffen by the throat now, and I thought that be was strangling the life out of the boy. They moved soundlessly, except where a twig snapped sometimes under their feet. Once, too, Ted Leffen gave out a gurgling gasp that roused my rage. I leaned down picking up the gun from the ground.

Stop it!" I cried to Kendrick, but he must have known that I dared not fire. The sight of the gun, however, must have spurred him into tenser fury, for he kept at his terrible attack with awful pertinacity, grown so bloodthirsty in the battle that he forgot all those considerations which had held him from desire of physical injury to the boy whom he had so grievously wronged in soul. He was mad, I think, from wish to kill the boy when a voice behind me suddenly cut across the silence and a hand reached for the gun which trembled in my hand.

"Let him alone," a voice said, and it was not until she had passed me that I knew Letty Williams, " or I'll kill you."

have penetrated to Kendrick's turbid consciousness, for he snarled back at her some threat of defiance.

"Let him go!" she shouted again, moving nearer to where the two men struggled. Just then I saw how completely the boy was at Kendrick's mercy, with those long fingers closing mercilessly upon his throat. A blinding flash blazed in front of me, a shot went roaring through the bush, and, as the smoke cleared, I saw Kendrick sway and fall, releasing his clutch on Leffen. A man, whom I knew later for Constable, but whom I could not remember at all then, passed me and bent over Kendrick "You've killed him," he said to Letty Williams, who stood with the smoking gun in her hand.

"What else could I do?" she cried. "He was killing Ted." She moved back a pace, threw down the peered at me pleadingly. "It happened that way, didn't it?" We'll have to bring her to," I evaded. I was helping him to lift Letty from the ground when a pocket flashlight thrust a circle of light upon us. "What's happened?" I heard Stratton's voice, and I saw him with Edith Kendrick Edith Kendrick stood quite motionless

"He was choking me. I got at my gun. She saw it." He glared at me as if daring me to tell the truth; but it was not his bravado, but the pathetic, limp helplessness of the girl between us which kept me silent Stratton turned to me, then saw Constable bending over Kendrick.

"Is he gone?" he asked. "Yes." said Constable.

He helped Stratton lift Letty Williams from the ground, and the two of them bore her back to the Kendrick house, Ted Leffen walking beside them, and Edith and I following. No one said a word until the men had laid the girl on the veranda couch, and she showed signs of returning consciousness as Ted Leffen worked over her. Then Constable called me aside.

"She killed him," he said, "and the Canadian law won't deal lightly with her."

"But he'll swear he did it." "And, if she's a witness, she'll break and tell the truth." "But what can we do?"

"I'm going to take her out tonight," he said. "I'll take my motor boat and run down to the Frederick House crossing. We'll get an engine there to the junction, and take the morning train south. She can stay away till it's all over."

"But Leffen?" I protested.

"There's not much danger for him," he said. "The Porcupine knows Kendrick too well for any regrets."

But why-," I began, not understanding why he should lie and scheme for the sake of a girl like Letty Williams.

He looked down at her consideringly. 'Somewhere in the world," he said with the solemn sadness of a man who has long dwelt with a hidden grief, "I have a daughter who, years ago, ran away from me because I was too hard upon her youth. I have prayed that she has not known paths like these." He nodded toward the moaning girl. "But, for her sake, I try to do what I can to give any girl a chance." He looked at me searchingly. "Will you give testimony for Leffen, as he wants it given?" he asked me. "Or shall I have to stay?"

"I'll give it." I promised.

Hours afterward, when the long northern twilight had sunk into the blackness of the short northern night, Edith Kendrick and I sat on the veranda and looked out on the waters of the lake. The police, summoned by Stratton, had come and gone, taking my story and Ted Leffen's. They had arrested the boy, and Stratton had gone with him.

With too many thoughts crowding in our hearts to allow speech, we brooded in the silence while Kendrick lay dead in the web he had woven. The moon, a glowing ball of gold, rose slowly over the tips of the pines at the edge of the water. It cast a long track of light upon the lake. In its gleam we saw the ribbon of foam in the wake of a

To Edith Kendrick it might have brought thought of her beloved sea. To me it brought knowledge that Constable, chief commissioner of the North Country, was helping a storm-beaten girl, fugitive from the justice of his own courts, over the border to the chance of waiting in peace for happi-
